School Board Goes for Tax Again

Menlo Park School District trustees this week asked the county board of supervisors for permission to resubmit the district's permissive tax rate proposal to the voters at the time of the June 5 election.

The supervisors, who meet next Tuesday, probably will consider the matter at that time, the trustees were told. The decision is entirely theirs, a member of the district attorney's staff was quoted as saying.

The resolution was passed by a three-to-one vote with trustee Dr. Glen Haydon dissenting. Trustee William Platt is out of the country. It will resubmit a proposal to raise the district's permissive tax rate maximum from its present $1.99 per $100 assessed valuation to $2.49 — the same proposal defeated in a special March 20 election.

The resolution was passed after long discussion, which featured the reading of a long prepared statement by trustee Mrs. Bea O'Donnell, and comments from other members of board and the audience.

And following that action, board members also heard a report on the proposed summer school budget, which they are still considering and which will not be modified if the tax proposal passes.

In her written statement, Mrs. O'Donnell said she felt failure of the March 20 tax proposal to pass was due to lack of communication between the school board and the community.

In her statement she wondered, rhetorically, whether the community really supported the school district, and addedthat she wondered if members of the community voted against the measure because they felt the district's curriculum and accomplishments were less than perfect.

FACE DEFICIT

Mrs. O'Donnell also pointed out that members of the school board are doing their best to maintain the standards of the school district, and pointed out that the district faces a deficit budget in the fall if the tax measure fails to pass.

But, she pointed out, the school board is pledged to keep the actual budget as low as possible, no matter what the maximum allowed.

The district, she concluded, is committed to the teaching of an academic curriculum emphasizing the basics and she said, devoid of "frills."

Dr. Haydon then entered the discussion to point out that on two previous occasions he has moved for passage of a proposed new teacher salary schedule and on both occasions his motion has died for lack of a second. He said he still felt that teachers' pay could be increased, and that other portions of the budget could be trimmed.

(At a special meeting a week ago, representatives of the district's teachers' salary committee agreed not to press for the proposed wage raise at this time, but would wait to see if the tax measure passes June 5.—ed.)

He also reiterated his stand that he didn't feel the district could operate under the proposed maximum for the next five years, and said he felt the matter should be studied further.

Board Chairman Elwood Williams told Haydon he thought he was "creating a crisis to prove a point" and that he did not think the budget deficit could be made up out of nonsalary items, if the new schedule is adopted.

Mrs. O'Donnell said that she felt it was only fair to Superintendent Franklyn White to give him an adequate budget, "so he can put some of his ideas into practice." White joined the district last fall.

COSTS UP

From the audience, E. R. Donalds said he had observed that the cost of education in the Menlo Park district has kept going up, in spite of the fact that school enrollment has levelled off.

He said the district did a "poor selling job" prior to the last election.

He conceded, though, that his property values have gone up appreciably in the 20 years he has lived in town.

Trustee Dr. Hiram Mears, addressing the audience, asked that, "if there are any disagreements, let's get them on the table."

Curriculum Consultant William Fisher referred to a study made last year by the University of California, which showed that districts in which the cost of education is high, tend to have better achievement. Menlo Park rates as "very efficient," he said.

Read into the record were letters of resignation of Dr. Orvis Krug, Hillview School seventh grade teacher, and Mary Ann Krug, Encinal first grade teacher, who said they were resigning "in protest against the failure of the permissive tax rate election."

Their resignations were accepted, with regret.

In other actions, the board—

—Agreed to go ahead with installation of sprinklers and turfing at Laurel School playground, at a cost of $2485;

—Heard an interim report on the district's insurance and coverage for the coming year;

—Heard a report on a recent survey of speech defects found in the district, and learned that 246 pupils in the district have them. They agreed the administration should tell parents of affected children when such defects are detected, since the district has no program for dealing with them.

HONORED GUEST . . . . . . Tuesday of Menlo Park Kiwanis Club, L. W. Lane Sr., president of Lane Publishing Co. (second from left), received resolution of commendation from Paul Belvel, service club's president. Flanking him are sons Melvin B. Lane (left), president of Lane Book Co., and L. W. (Bill) Lane Jr., publisher of Sunset Magazine and president of Lane Magazine Co.

10 Years in Menlo Park:

Service Clubs Fete 'Sunset'

Sunset Magazine's decade in Menlo Park as a pioneer of suburban business development was officially marked by city, county and service club officials at a Tuesday luncheon.

The Menlo Park Kiwanis Club was host, its president, Paul Belvel presiding.

Guests of honor were L. W. Lane Sr., president of Lane Publishing Co.; L. W. (Bill) Lane Jr., publisher of Sunset Magazine and president of Lane Magazine Co., and Melvin B. Lane, president of Lane Book Co.

County officials attending included all five members of the Board of Supervisors, T. Louis Chess, James Fitzgerald, Alvin Hatch, Edward R. McDonald, and William Werder, Superior Court Judge James T. O'Keefe, and County Manager E. R. Stallings.

Altogether, approximately 160 persons attended the event.

Introduced by Program Chairman J. Wendell Howe, Lane and his two sons described the varied operations of the publishing firm, which is headquartered in unique "California ranch-style" offices on a landscaped seven-acre site at the corner of Middlefield and Willow Roads.

Bill Lane pointed out that the 37 per cent increase in Sunset Magazine's circulation during the past 10 years is roughly comparable to population growth in the regional magazine's territory of seven western states and Hawaii.

RESTRICTIVE

This, he explained, has occurred in the face of the magazine's highly selective circulation policy, aiming at homeowning families in relatively high-class residential areas.

Despite rigid restrictions on acceptable advertising in keeping with this circulation policy, he said, Sunset carries more advertising than any other monthly consumer magazine.

Gross volume of the publishing firm's operations in 1961, he indicated, was about $10,000,000, an increase of 150 per cent during the 10 years the business has been in Menlo Park.

Melvin Lane described the growth of Lane Book Company from the days — in the 1930s — when the firm started publishing booklets to "sell" circulation of the magazine.

When the firm moved to Menlo Park, the book division of the company employed seven persons, he said, and listed 22 book titles. Today it employs 28 persons and lists 82 titles. Annual dollar volume of the book company, durin gthat time, has increased five-fold, from $200,000 to $1,000,000 in 1961, he said.

Recent developments, he added, have led the company beyond the familiar "how-to-do-it" theme into the realm of school textbooks, with several volumes conecrning subject matter pertaining strictly to the Western United States.

L. W. Lane Sr. outlined the philosophy behind the publishing company he had headed since 1928.

With the realization that the magazine's regional nature forever limited it in size, Lane said, many restrictive policies were adopted to assure emphasis on quality rather than quantity. The second important factor in the company's philosophy was the willingness, then, to abide by those policies even in the face of great pressure.

Lane drew a parallel with the growth of Menlo Park, pointing out that because geographical limitations destine it forever to remain a a small city, it must make up in quality what it always will lack in size.

He predicted that the city will be faced with many temptations to break down its standards.

"In the next 10 years," he said, "the city will fave tremendous pressures."

If the area is to resist the pressure and avoid being overrun, he said, city and county officials will need great support from the citizenry.

Workers Active As Election Nears

An up-to-deadline concerted campaign by community groups, women's organization and volunteer workers throughout Menlo Park was launched this week to assure passage of the community activities building bond issue April 10.

A two-thirds majority of the voters will be called upon to register their approval for this addition to Menlo Park's civic center development.

Four candidates, seeking three posts on the Menlo Park city council, also will be seeking favor of the voters at the polls. Descriptions and statements appear on Page 2 of this issue of the Recorder.

Although no formal opposition to the building proposal has been voiced, campaign chairman L. L. Johnston said this week, whatever opposition may exist in the minds of voters probably stems from the fact that some may fear passage of the issue will result in new taxation to pay for the new facilities.

Johnston emphasized that the $450,000 issue will be retired out of sales tax revenues. The city sales tax is already in effect and city policy has been set so that receipts from it can be used in projects of this sort.

Johnston has been aided in his campaign by co-chairmen Art Stadler, James Stepp and Dave Diegelman.

"'No tax increase' is probably the key slogan in our campaign and it has been repeated in all literature and material sent out in behalf of the bond issue," Johnston said.

He added that there has been substantial evidence of support for the proposal, with Finance Chairman Stepp reporting that donations for campaign literature have been made by private business firms and by service clubs, merchants' groups and residents.

Meanwhile, he said, those who desire more information about the project, or who have reservations regarding the need for such a community activities building, should contact Fred Parsons, city recreation director, for further information.

He may be contacted at the city hall switchboard, DA 5-3211.

No Fuss About F'way

Strong and fully anticipated homeowner protests to the recently adopted "MALE" line freeway failed to materialize at Tuesday night's Menlo Park City Council study session.

Although city hall had received numerous phone calls from interested residents all day Tuesday, only one housewife showed up to view a large scale map of the route adopted March 28 by the California Highway Commission. And she left without voicing an opinion during the meeting.

The council, too, was surprisingly lacking in strong comment on the 6.4 miles of State Highway Route 107, which runs generally along Willow Road between Santa Cruz Avenue and south of El Camino Real, thence to the east of Willow Road and on to the Dumbarton Bridge.

In going over the map supplied by Clifford Green, State Division of Highways engineer, City Manager John Johnson pointed out that a formal agreement on the freeway route may not be reached for a year and half. He said Green informed him there would be more details forthcoming on the route's grade separations.

Commenting on the time element, Councilman Michael Belangie quipped: "We'll have a man on the moon before they get this freeway done."

Johnson said the large map of the "MALE" line freeway will be kept up in the city council chambers for the public to view.

The highway commission, in adopting the new route, found.

1. The total cost for right-of-way and construction is $2,300,000 lower on the "MALE" line than on the "MA" line.

2. The total assessed valuation of property required for the "MALE" line is $122,000 lower than for the "MA" line.

3. The amount of assessed valaution of property required would be more equitably distributed among the communities affected by the "MALE" alternate than on the "MA" line.

2 More Automobile Dealers Eye MP

Two more automobile dealerships are negotiating with Stanford University to lease space along El Camino Real, it was stated here Monday night.

If and when they're built, it'll mean there'll be a total of five new car dealerships fronting on the east side of the highway south of Middle Avenue.

The word that other dealers were interested in moving to the area was given by William F. Hempel, architect, representing Lutz Ford Sales. He was present at the regular monthly meeting of the planning commission to secure approval, as a matter of architectural control, of plans for a new new-and-used car outlet facing the highway opposite College Avenue.

Simpson Motors and Ken Lowell auto agencies have been completed in the area during the past year. Lutz Ford, which will continue to maintain shows in Palo Alto, will be the third dealership.

The two other dealerships negotiating with Stanford were not named by Hempel.

Construction of the permanent auto dealer buildings has been made possible by a recent revision of Stanford leasing policy, which now makes it possible for developers to construct permanent buildings.

For several years, the university leased out the property facing El Camino Real on a short-term basis.

The planners okayed drawings of the proposed Lutz agency building.

In other actions, the planning commission Monday:

1. Recommended new rezoning of the Delfino Tract, under which the subdivision would include lots of two minimum sizes — 7000 square feet and 10,000 square feet.

2. Denied a variance which would have allowed the Alec United membership department store to construct 290 square feet of signs. Under present city law, the store is entitled to 100 square feet of signs.

3. Granted a use permit to allow removal of a private duck club, owned by T. I. Moseley of Atherton, from under a Pacific Gas and Electric Co. power line right of way on Ravenswood Point, to another location near the Dumbarton bridge approach.

4. Approved a resubdivision of property owned by Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Genasci at 100 San Mateo Drive. In calculating the area of the resulting lots, the planners figured that one of the lots reached to the center of San Francisquito Creek.

That way, it would have a total of about 14,000 square feet of which about 8000 square feet is above the creek and usable.

5. Approved plans for a 12,000 square foot office and warehouse building to be constructed for the Rapid Standards Corporation at 1150 Chrysler Drive in Bohannon Industrial Park.

6. Okayed plans for a new warehouse and office to be constructed in Kavanaugh Industrial Park. The building is to have 16,000 square feet of floor space, is being built on speculation, and may be subdivided into smaller units, developer Tom Kavanaugh said.

The building will face O'Brien Drive.

First Council Contest Set In Woodside

Woodside will have its first contested town council election next Tuesday, with four of five candidates bidding for two seats.

Incumbent Mrs. Rose A. O'Neill and newcomer Ralph George face each other for the council's district 4. Vying for district 6 are incumbent Selah Chamberlain Jr. and B. Heinz Gundel, a new candidate.

Uncontested are incumbent Fredrick Hawkins for district 2 and Richard E. Wedekind, who is running again for the town treasurer's post.

Two polling places will be open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. They are the multi-purpose room of the Woodside Elementary School and room 9 of the Woodside Village Church school.

Hawkins, Gundel and George are endorsed by the Woodside Volunteers for Representative Government, a recently formed citizens' group espousing wider representation.

Mrs. O'Neill, Mr. Chamberlain and Mr. Wedekind have been in their present positions since Woodside's incorporation in 1956.

Hawkins was appointed to the council last summer to fill the vacancy left by the death of Richard Marshall.

Gundel, a resident of Woodside since 1955, is a scientist with Lockheed Missiles and Space Co. Locally, he is a member of the board of directors of the Woodside Property Owners' Assn.

George has been a Woodside resident since 1959. A certified public accountant, he is currently treasurer of the Hyatt Corp. of America in Burlingame.

To aid voters in evaluating the past record of the town council, four Woodside housewives this week formulated a fact sheet

Portola Valley Site?

'Birdland' Flying the Coop, Developer Tells Woodside

Backers of a proposed bird park for the Searsville Lake area of Woodside said this week they'll move their project to San Jose if unsuccessful in gaining a local site soon.

Alexander Isenberg, organizer and managing director of what will be known as "Birdland," said he has ruled out further negotiations with the Woodside Planning Commission and is seeking other possible sites in Portola Valley. The commission recently advised him that he would have to request a zoning amendment to allow the commercial bird sanctuary on West Searsville Lake. The area is now zoned residential.

Isenberg listed three other sites which the park has been considering without much promise of acquisition. They include Neylan Estate acreage adjoining The Sequoias and Stanford land adjoining Searsville Lake Park and in the Jasper Ridge area.

Although a site is readily available in the Almaden district near San Jose, he stressed that he prefers to locate the park somewhere in Portola Valley because it would be serviced from his home at 451 Portola Road.

Isenberg, a world-renowned bird authority, has 400 birds available to form the nucleus of the park's first exhibits. Breeding of additional birds for the park would take place in the aviaries adjoining his residence.

At least 20 acres are needed for the project, Isenberg explained. The main exhibits will be housed in a building approximately 70 by 200 feet, and there will be three large flight cages, the central one of which will be artificially heated to simulate a tropical rain forest habitat.

Subsidiary facilities will include a Jewel Room House for exhibiting individual birds, ponds for waterfowl, arbored pheasant runs, food preparation room, rest rooms and a parking lot.

Isenberg explained that the natural setting will be preserved in laying out the park. He said Birdland is primarily an educational venture which should be a valuable asset to schools, scout groups, and nature groups of the entire Bay Area.

Ravenswood District:

Board to Approve School Boundary Changes Monday

Approval of changes in school attendance boundaries will be made official at Monday night's Ravenswood City School District meeting.

School trustees made clear at a special Tuesday night meeting that they intended to vote acceptance of Supt. of Schools Roderic V. Moore's recommendations at that time.

This week's meeting was with members of the boundary committee who made the report upon which Moore based his recommendations.

The trustees could have taken action Tuesday—and a motion of approval was introduced by Trustee Charlotte Roden. But Moore reminded them that they'd made a commitment to act at the Monday, April 9, meeting, and Mrs. Roden withdrew the motion.

The district problem is this: Underpopulated school areas west of Bayshore and several overpopulated ones east of the highway.

Not one person has appeared at any of the past three school board meetings to protest either the committee's report or the superintendent's recommendation on realignment.

The keys to the plan are reactivation of Ravenswood School as a first through fifth grade school, easterly expansion of Flood School area to include children an area near the Belleve Haven overpass, expanding the Willow School area across Bayshore to encompass one square block of the current Belle Haven School area, and setting aside a neighborhood in Palo Alto Gardens as an extension of the O'Connor School attendance area.

Board members, Moore and committeemen discussed a number of points Tuesday night.

Moore noted that attendance areas for the three district seventh - eighth grade schools should be studied "within the year." The present action involves only kindergarten-through-sixth grade schools.

Committee chairman Elbert Mitchell pressed the group's contention that an election should be held soon to bond the district to capacity and make it eligible for more school building aid.

But Moore said that recent legislation concerning bond elections has the effect of eliminating chances for an election here until after Jan. 1 of next year.

Mitchell said, and Moore agreed, that he was sure the public would support bonding the district, at no increase in taxes, to allow construction of new facilities some place in the Brentwood School area where district student ppulation problems are tremendously complicated.

Mrs. Doris Landman of the committee asked if the district might want to expand even further the Willow and Flood annexations of Belle Haven school attendance area.

She asid that perhaps the students coming to Willow and Flood from across the highway might feel better if more students of similar cultural background were attending school with them.

School board chairman Wesley Pomeroy said the district should never change attendance areas on the basis of so-called "cultural differences."

At the end of the discussion, committee members James Eckels and Clarence Noyer asked that the board make clear to the public its views on attendance area policy.

Police Seek Elevator Fire Bugs

Firemen and police this week were looking for miscreants who, they said, apparently attempted to light fires on two separate occasions in the elevator at the Peninsula Volunteers' senior citizens housing development at 817 Partridge Ave.

Mrs. Frieda Lamp, a resident at that address, called firemen Saturday at 6:45 p.m. She said she'd found burning papers in the elevator, and that someone also apparently had tried to burn the control buttons off the panel that controls the elevator's operation.

A number of burned matches were found in the vicinity, firemen said.

HUB CAPS STOLEN

Somebody, during the night of March 30-31, stole the hub caps off a small foreign sedan owned by Franklin Ford, 441 Olive St.

In Lindenwood:

Atherton Eyes $30,000 Job Of Replacing Light Cables

A sort of Hobson's choice loomed before the Atherton Town Council last week at its regular monthly meeting when city administrator Howard Boren broke the news that the street light electric cables serving the Lindenwood area, all 120 homes, has gone kaput and the only real solution is to replace all 17,400 feet of it.

Boren also dropped some disheartening figures — disheartening to those who would have to pay it. The replacement project would cost about $30,000, based on a $1.50 per foot cost for new conduit cables, which in turn would mean an assessment of about $250 per home in Lindenwood.

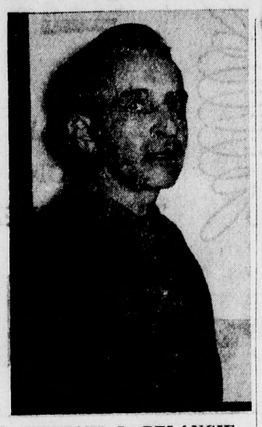

The alternative is to patch up the lines—again. But Boren noted that the Town already has spent some $800 in patching which hasn't done the job.

Some of the direct burial cable has been there since 1936. Lindenwood residents have been afflicted with dimming or self-extinguishing lights in wintertime over the past several years because the insulation around the cable has rotted away and water touches the bare wires during wet weather, causing them to short circuit.

A study has been made by PG&E, Boren told the councilmen, with the recommendation made that the entire system be replaced as the present setup's condition no longer was serviceable.

4 Menlo Park City Council Candidates State Qualifications

Belangie

MICHAEL L. BELANGIE

Michael L. Belangie, 428 Felton Drive, has been a resident of Menlo Park since 1945 and served on the city council, first, from 1950 to 1955 and, later, from 1957 to the present. He served as mayor for 19 months during 1954 and 1955, and was reappointed to succeed the late Charles P. Burgess, who died in office.

Belangie, a native of Montana, was educated in schools in that state and attended the State University at Missoula.

He has been, successively, a hydroelectric station operator, regional supervisor, western states, agricultural marketing administration, U.S. Department of Agriculture. From 1946 until last year he owned and operated Menlo Textiles, a custom weaving firm here, and currently is executive secretary of the Sharon Heights Golf and Country Club.

Belangie is married and is 54 years old.

CANDIDATE'S STATEMENT

I am a candidate to succeed myself for a third term on the city council because I feel that my experience and interest in the city of Menlo Park requires that I work for continuity of good government.

I feel that the most important phases of development within the next few years include the expansion of our area's population to the hills to the west, and the solution to the east-west trafficway problem.

I endorse and support the community activities building bond issue proposal which, if passed, is to be paid for out of sales tax revenues. I feel it is integral to the orderly development of our civic center for the maximum usefulness of all our people.

I will endeavor to seek a solution to the Ladera dam project, other than that proposed by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

During the past several years Menlo Park's industrial and professional-administrative areas have seen an unprecedented growth, fostered by careful planning and high standards imposed by your city council.

We must continue to foster such high-quality development, increasing both payroll and tax bases of the city, for the betterment of all. Of particular importance to me is the expansion of our parking plazas so that our commercial areas will have a competitive vitality with other areas of similar purpose.

It has been my pledge — which I restate — that I shall bend my best efforts for an efficient, effective city government.

CONTRIBUTE BLOOD

Members of the congregation of the Menlo Park Presbyterian church, Menlo-Adobe Post 828 of the American Legion, and members of the staff of Stanford Research Institute last week donated blood, when the "Bloodmobile" of the Peninsula Memorial Blood bank visited the San Carlos American Legion hall.

Bonde

Ida Bonde, 43, has been a resident of Menlo Park since the city annexed the area in which he lives, the Willows area, in 1950. He has been a member of the city council since 1955.

A native of Paso Robles, he attended San Jose State College.

He is employed as an engineer in steel fabrication with the Engfer Iron Works in San Jose.

His family includes his wife, a son, Wayne, who is a senior at Menlo-Atherton High School and a daughter, Kristeen, who is a sophomore at San Jose State College.

In addition to serving on the city council, he is chairman of the board of directors of the South San Mateo County Garbage and Refuse Disposal District. He resides at 370 Nova Lane.

CANDIDATE'S STATEMENT

Having been a member of the City Council for the past seven years I have had an opportunity to be part of the leadership that has developed the community on an orderly and progressive basis. This type of development has upheld the principles that have made Menlo Park an attractive place in which to live and work.

I will work for a continuance of the objectives that have been established by the Master Plan and for the development of a proper traffic system, recreation, library, and civic center facilities that are needed by a growing community.

In regard to a freeway, I believe that freeways are vital to our transportation system and to the economic well - being of the area. However, they must be located where they will benefit and be convenient to the people who use them.

I have not changed my position on the proposed Willow Freeway route locations in Menlo Park, nor do I intend to support any agreement that will locate the freeway on any of Division of Highway's recommended or suggested routes.

In addition I support the development of flood control measures and an adequate downtown program of offstreet parking and beautification.

I will continue to put forth my best efforts and judgement on the problems that will be confronting us in the next few years.

Valley Center Launches Jazz Series

The new Portola Valley Community Center will stage the first of a weekly series of jazz workshops tonight at the main clubhouse of the Alpine Hills Tennis and Swimming Club, 4139 Alpine Road.

The informal affair directed by William Telfer will run from 7:30 to 11 p.m. and is open to all musicians interested in joining the center. On subsequent Thursdays, the workshops will be at the adjacent old clubhouse, now used as center headquarters.

On Thursday night, April 26, The Sequoias will hold a square dance demonstration in cooperation with the community center. All Portola Valley residents are invited to attend the dance at Hanson Hall, the senior citizen community's recreation building. The center plans to "join hands" with the Sequoians in the regular Thursday night sessions until the time its own quarters can accommodate such dancing.

Don Newport of Menlo Park will be the caller for the April 26 get-together. Program chairmen are Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Handley.

The center last week announced that its membership for adults will cost $2 per year and for persons under 18 will be $1 per year.

Among important things now being scheduled is a series of art classes under the noted painter, Joseph Sheridan.

Persons interested in the beginning jazz workshops are requested to call Mr. Telfer at ULmar 1-0353.

The community center's present officers include: Mrs. Philip Grimes, president; Michtel Wills, vice-president; Robert Gates, treasurer; Miss Virginia Olsen, secretary; Mrs. Philip Barrett, publicity; Ronald Chambers and William Telfer, board members; and Mrs. Ronald Chambers, historian.

Christian Science Radio Series

A new radio series designed to highlight the essential vitality of Bible teachings was announced this week by the local Christian Science Church.

Starting April 8, Station KGO will broadcast the weekly 15-minute series called "The Bible Speaks to You."

The programs describe how prawer can meet familiar problems confronting people in all walks of life. They will feature well-loved selections from the Bible, read against a background of organ music. Informal discussion brings out the practical application of these teachings.

"The Bible Speaks to You" replaces the series "How Christian Science Heals" which has been on the air every week since Sept. 18, 1953. It is produced by the Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass. Will B. Davis, manager of the committee on publication, is in charge of the project.

Manhattan Apt. Okay Appealed

The controversial design of an apartment house at 1950-1952 Manhattan Ave., East Palo Alto, will receive the attention of the San Mateo County Board of Supervisors.

Mrs. Charles Ish, co-owner of apartments at 1965 Manhattan Ave., appealed a 3-1 county planning commission vote approving the design.

The building design provides for an eight-foot front yard as compared to the standard of 20 feet and shows parking for 45 cars. The commission okayed both the front yard variance and a cut in parking spaces

HEATER 'SHORTS'

Firemen Friday at 12:15 p.m. were called to an office at 1010 Doyle St., when an electric heater being used there short circuited.

Borchert

Major Max Borchert, 64, a permanent resident of Menlo Park since 1847, has spent a career in amy hospital administration. Enlisting during World War I, he was commissioned in 1928.

He first came to Menlo Park as a member of the Dibble Hospital staff in 1944, and remained on it until it closed in 1947. Retiring at that time, he has made his permanent home here since.

He resides with his wife at 37 Willow Road.

CANDIDATE'S STATEMENT

After 30 years of service to my country in the U.S. Army, and 15 years of retirement as a resident of this beautiful city, I feel it my duty to accept the call of my many friends and neighbors to serve them and the community in the position to which I am nominated. I have the time and desire to do this, and I believe I am qualified to do so.

Since my retirement I have been vitally interested in civic and community affairs pertaining to all residents of Menlo Park and I have been active in veterans' organizations, particularly the welfare of disabled veterans and their dependents.

I shall always try to be of service to the best of my ability.

It has recently been rumored that I "rose to the bait of the Willow Freeway controversy, and that my nomination papers were signed, among others, by a party who led the fight against all freeways in Menlo Park." A look at the record will prove this to be untrue.

However, I do agree with the attitude and the opinion of the overwhelming majority of those residents contacted that the proposed Willow Freeway or any freeway or super-highway in Menlo Park is unnecessary, unwarranted, undesirable and unwanted. This was my conviction before I was nominated for this office; it will continue so if I am elected, and it still will remain unchanged if I am defeated.

In all other matters I shall always endeavor to exert every possible effort toward the continued good government of the affairs of Menlo Park and for the best interests of all concerned.

I am proud to be a citizen of this beautiful city and I am likewise proud of its present and previous city officials for their progressive accomplishments and achievements for the betterment of Menlo Park.

Use Permit Granted for Church Here

Menlo Park City Planning Commission Monday night granted a use permit for construction of a new Episcopal church, to be known as St. Bede's, at Sand Hill Road and Monte Rosa Drive.

The new church will seat approximately 400 persons, representatives said.

It is the first of several churches to be built along Sand Hill; several denominations reserved space in that area when the Sharon estate was subdivided several years ago.

Applying for the use permit for the church were representatives of the Holy Trinity Episcopal church here.

In their request, they asked a use permit for a "church, Sunday school and parish day school, parish hall and/or auditorium chapel and necessary living quarters and offices."

When finally developed, church representatives said, the site will have between 100 and 125 offstreet parking spaces. The church site is five acres in extent.

Access to the church grounds would be from Monte Rosa Drive. Space would be reserved for a future Sand Hill Road frontage road.

The use permit was granted, subject to review of final plans as a matter of architectural control.

Calloway

James Calloway, a resident of Menlo Park for the past five years, has been a member of the city recreation commission for the past two years.

A native of North Carolina, he is 42 and resides at 383 Waverley St.

He was active in the organization of Babe Ruth baseball in New Jersey prior to moving to Menlo Park, and has also been active in the organization of young people's baseball leagues here.

He has been active as an advisor to the Menlo Park Recreation Department "Teen Club" County Fair here for the past two years.

His family includes his wife and a daughter, Betty, who is a student at the University of California at Davis.

CANDIDATE'S STATEMENT

The reason I entered the Menlo Park city council race is because I am interested in seeing Menlo Park grow and continue to be one of the most outstanding cities in California.

We must all work hard to keep it this way by seeing that our parks and recreation facilities keep pace with the growth of our community, so all of our children will have plenty of wholesome recreation.

We must continue to expand our business and shopping areas and provide plenty of free offstreet parking for these areas. We must also attract good clean light industries to our industrial sections.

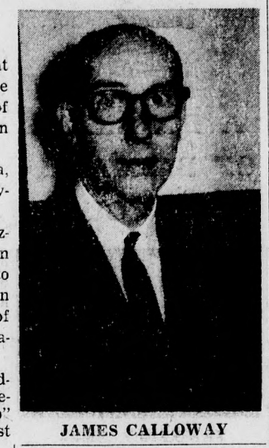

There are several large problems facing Menlo Park at the present time. These include the proposed freeway, the Army Corps of Engineers' proposed Ladera dam, local traffic problems and rapid transit.

All of these must be studied long and hard in order that we derive the utmost benefit and not harm from them.

I am opposed to the proposed freeway route in Menlo Park because I don't feel this will solve our local traffic problems and it would remove too much property from the local tax roll.

I believe I have demonstrated to the people of Menlo Park during the past three years my interest in civic affairs, by serving on our recreation commission and working with our young people.

If elected to the city council I will continue to serve all the people of Menlo Park.

Road Cave-In Studied In Woodside

Soil tests are underway this week to determine how to prevent another cave-in of Summit Springs Road in Woodside.

Sections of the road were reported "still moving," although not as much as when heavy rains caused the initial collapse in early March.

Several soil test borings are being made by the town's engineer in planning specifications for reconstruction of 600 feet of the roadway. Stanley Kangas, assistant to town engineer Lawrence Brian, said no cost estimate has been determined yet.

The specifications will be presented to the Woodside Town Council at its regular meeting April 9.

Kangas said that in event of another heavy downpour, most of the remaining section of weakened roadway would probably collapse into the adjoining canyon.

The early March cave-in of 200 feet of roadway isolated the homes of three residents and disrupted water service to some 30 home owners in the area. An 8-inch water main broke, emptying a 150,000 gallon hillside water tank. Water service has been restored and a temporary by-pass road put in for the three homeowners cut off by the slide.

WHY YOU SHOULD VOTE YES

for the Menlo Park Community Activities Building?

For years the people of Menlo Park have recognized the need for a Community Activities Building which would provide Children, Teenagers, and Adults with the facilities to carry on the many programs underway in this community today.

As a taxpayer, your very natural question is . . .

"All right, admitted this Community Activities Building is a worthwhile addition to Menlo Park, and one which will serve everyone in the community, just how much will it cost and will it increase my taxes?

The answer to this is short and to the point . . .

"The cost of the Community Activities Building will be $450,000. This cost will be financed by bonds which will be paid off with Menlo Park's local sales tax revenue. Included in this cost will be all building construction, all furnishings, parking area, patios, and landscaping."

In other words, your taxes will not be increased in any way to pay for this Community Center.

The Community Center can be a gift to the people of Menlo Park, but even a gift has to be wanted.

The way for you to show that you want this building is to VOTE for it, and unless you do, on Tuesday, April 10th, Menlo Park will lose a wonderful addition which you, your children, and your friends need and should have.

VOTE YES ON TUESDAY, APRIL 10

Realtors Plan Program Of Activities

A. H. Crosby and other officers of the Menlo Park-Atherton Board of Realtors met with Charles H. Brown of Pasadena, president of the 37,000 member California Real Estate Association and H. Jackson Pontius of Arcadia, executive vice-president, recently to discuss and plan the association's 1962 activities in this area.

David A. Diegelman, a past president of the Board of Realtors who is this year's vice-president for District 25 comprising all of San Mateo County, chaired the meeting.

Crosby announced that all of the boards of realtors in San Mateo County are co-sponsoring the annual educational and sales conference together with CREA which this year will be held at the Hilton Inn, International Airport on Thursday, April 12.

"This is your life . . . Mrs. R. E. Salesman" is this year's theme of the conference, according to Crosby. He said that because there is a continuous need to revitalize the selling habits of Realtors and salesmen this program will review the proven techniques of selling.

He noted that today more education and training is required of Realtors and real estate salesmen to meet the needs of the community.

Principal speaker at the conference will be Millard Bennett, of New York City, nationally recognized author, lecturer and publisher, it was announced.

'International Aspect' Prevails At Fremont School in Menlo

Twenty-one Fremont school pupils assembled around a large globe on the front steps of the school recently. In so doing, they pointed out that the school has a definitely international aspect.

They represent five languages and eight countries plus territorial Hawaii before statehood.

"It was surprising to me," said Raymond Cruickshank, principal, "to discover that a sizable ratio of our student body have roots in other cultures, and that a number of them are bilingual. We hope these students are able to bring more personal illustrations into our social studies curriculum."

The climate, the Peninsula's business opportunities, and the cultural adjacency of Stanford University and SRI have attracted the families who have children presently attending Menlo Park Schools.

Mr. and Mrs. Jose H. G. Pamplona are parents of three enrollees, Olga Marie, Mauricio, and Paulo, who accompanied them from Ceara, Brazil, while Pamplona spends a year with the Economic Research Division of SRI.

Peter Debski and Albert Mroz were born in Warsaw. Their mothers were childhood friends, and both graduated from the University of Warsaw's School of Dentistry. Albert arrived in this country with his parents a year and a half ago after short stays in France and Switzerland. Peter and his parents arrived only five months ago after a two year stay in Egypt. Both mothers are studying English in night school and hope, eventually, to set up practice together.

Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Woollard have three children, all born in the London suburb of Essex, enrolled in Menlo Park schools; Janice at Fremont, Linda at Hillview and Sidney at M-A. Mrs. Woollard recommends the International Ballroom Dancing group, which she was intrumental in forming, as a social aid to all newcomers who wish to participate.

Three of the boys, Craig Williams, Tommy Anderson, and Kenny Lazarus, born in Honolulu, Oahu, and Manila, respectively, were born while their American parents were on business tours of duty outside of the continental United States.

The other children pictured are Simon and Linda Grace, born in Portsmouth, England; Brin and Bess Hill, born in West Germany; Pat Stewart, born in Canada; Roger and Victor Hammond, born in Australia; Guy Ayers, born in Canada; Sonja Van Zeventer, born in Jakarta, Indonesia; Evelyn Schweder, born in Canada; and Annette Shooter, born in England. Steve and Tom Okoniewski, also pictured, speak Polish and represent another group of children within the school who are bilingual, though native born.

As We See It:

The Freeway: Still No Answer To Local Traffic Problems

The State Highway Commission has adopted a proposed route for the so-called Willow Sand Hill Freeway link through Menlo Park.

They say it costs less, and is more equitable in its distribution of damage to benefitting cities than previous proposals. There, say the highway commissioners, it is.

With a weary sigh, we once again reiterate our stand on the whole thing:

A road link between Willow Road in Menlo Park and Sand Hill Road in Stanford is necessary. A freeway is not necessary. It confers no advantage on the cities through which it would be cut, it solves no local traffic problems, and only four per cent of its users would, according to the Division of Highways projectionists, use it for through travel from Dumbarton Bridge to the regions west of Menlo Park and vice versa.

Since the state highway commission appears to have a mania for building freeways without regard to local problems or the solution thereof, it looks as of we ought to pick up our marbles and go home, starting all over again and working exclusively with agencies which are sensible about local problems.

Activities Building Bond Deserving of Support

Tuesday, voters of the City of Menlo Park will go to the polls to cast ballots on whether or not the city's facilities should be augmented by the addition of a community activities building in the civic center.

It should be a joyful occasion, for it will provide an opportunity for the city's voters to decide how the money they have been and will continue to invest, in the form of sales tax collections, will be spent.

We think the proposed $450,000 bond issue, to be retired from the sales tax revenues, will be properly spent on such a building, which will be of use and value to just about any segment of the community want to name.

Some days and evenings might well be set aside for meetings of adult service and social groups, some hours of the day for extension classes and childrens' acitivities and some for youth activities.

That the city is woefully short of meeting-hall space, there can be little doubt.

Turn now to the financial aspect of this thing.

The community activities bond issue is a fairly rare variety of thing in that its passage cannot possibly be reflected in a raise in the property tax rate.

The one per cent sales tax is a fact; we're all paying it. We're not going to get out of paying it, either. We think it wise, attractive and proper that its receipts be used in a tangible manner, for the benefit of the largest possible number of people in the city.

Council Candidates Deserve Gratitude

This year Menlo Park voters face a fairly rare circumstance: There's a contested city election; four men are running for three posts on the city council.

Anybody who files for election to any public board, who is willing to assume responsibility for municipal government without pay, deserves the congratulations of thinking members of the community.

Without such people local self-government would either disappear, or would be modified to the extent that our local governmental affairs would come to be run by a bunch of "experts" who might or might not have the greatest good for the greatest number at heart.

There's something else that the voters of Menlo Park haven't had in a local election for some years, also. This year, when the voters go to the polls, they'll have a chance to vote their convictions on certain issues confronting city government.

The major issue, of course, is the freeway. The State Highway Commission has adopted a route which at least partially splits Menlo Park.

The city council has a couple of weapons it can use if the majority of its members don't like this location. They can refuse to sign a street-closing agreement with the state, or they can petition the city's legislative representatives in Sacramento to have the so-called Willow-Sand Hill Road link removed from the state highway system.

Before casting your ballot in the coming election, you'll do well, therefore, to find out how the various candidates stand on this matter.

There are other issues, some of which require mature understanding such as can only be developed by long tenure on the council. The present incumbents who are running to succeed themselves, for instance, are well briefed in the intricacies of the city's stand concerning the Ladera Dam, master planning for the future, and other items of business with which the council has concerned itself through the years. We therefore endorse the candidacies of Councilmen Ira Bonde and Michael L. Belangie.

Of the other two candidates, James Calloway and Major Max Borchert, we endorse the candidacy of Calloway, who for the past two years has served with distinction as a member of the city's recreation commission and who has demonstrated a vital concern for a wide variety of city problems.

Our Nose for News

TELLS US:

The state department of public health this week comes up with a "finding":

"An interesting development of the last decade is drinking while watching television, according to the first in a series of reports by the State Health Department on California drinking practices.

"Dr. Malcolm H. Merrill, state health director, said it is a drinking situation of particular significance because it does not take place in a social setting, although others may be present. Nor can it appropriately be classified as drinking alone, even if no one else is present.

"'Perhaps,' he added, 'it is in a class with smoking, giving people something to do with their hands when they are not otherwide occupied'."

So now you know.

'This Is It,' Says Highway Commission

County Comment:

Grand Jury Is County Watchdog

By FLOYD F. McCUE
Editor and Publisher, Redwood City Star-Advertiser

Practically since the beginning of local government history the county grand jury has been making an annual report to the board of supervisors, sometimes being critical and other times praising the administration of the many county offices.

That routine was the same as followed by the 1962 grand jury but this time the report will have another use than to be just filed away with others drawing dust in hidden files.

County Manager E. R. Stallings and the board of supervisors are preparing to answer every recommendation submitted by the grand jury.

Stallings said that some of the recommendaations are "very sound" and undoubtedly will be put into effect as early as possible. Naturally, there are others — probably many of them — that the board will not find suitable to operations.

One, for instance, is the recommendation that comes in almost every year to establish a county-owned laundry at Community Hospital.

The manager said this recommendation had been analyzed on several occasions over the years and each time it was decided it was not feasible. First, the county would have to tie up a large sum of money, plus the fact that the county wants to stay out of competition with private business.

When we mentioned some of the other fields where the county is in competition with private business, Stallings said "we were hitting below the belt."

We referred to printing in particular, because that is our field, but we didn't seem to get the message across. Several unions have complained because the county hires its own workers instead of getting help from union personnel. This is an age-old question and the arguments on both sides have merit so "business" as such gets nowhere.

It will be interesting to read the supervisors' answers to the grand jury recommendations. While they won't get their way right down the line the jury members will at least know that county officials are taking recognition of a year's study into government operations.

For the most part this year the jury gave more praise than criticism of operations, which could have been the signal for candidates to stay out of a fight with the present office holders.

With the time for filing about over, the county will have one of the quietest elections ever in June.

The only spot that will hold interest is the race for county tax collector with three, and possibly four, in the battle to succeed Miss Lorraine Dickey, who is retiring.

We're told that there was a lot of big money floating around to finance a candidate to oppose District Attorney Keith C. Sorenson, but up to the last minute, there was no one who would take the chance.

The DA won so handily four years ago when opposition was supposedaly strong that everyone isn't anxious to take the obvious chance. Keith, who probably could have a superior judgeship appointment any time he wants it, apparently wants to stay where he is and until he decides to "move up" candidates will be few and far between.

We seldom find the sheriff without opposition, but here, too, the incumbent Earl B. Whitmore is apparently just too strong to get opposition.

The county engineer, too, is often challenged, but Don S. Wilson apparently has smoothed out controversies that existed in previous administrations and is set. Many thought the increased salary schedules set to go into effect with the start of a new term would attract candidates for almost every office.

Again it apparently is the feeling that, on the whole, everyone is doing a good job and the incumbents are too strong to be ousted without a solid opposition platform.

This is true, too, of the incumbent supervisors, Board Chairman T. Louis Chess and Edward R. McDonald Guess times are too good on the outside or could the citizens be ready to admit that the supervisors are doing a good job!

With a bond issue practically set for the June ballot for the Hall of Justice addition, there is a pool being established in the courthouse, so we hear. Not whether the bonds of approximately $3 millions will pass, but who will get the new "tower" on that addition which is expected to go six or seven stories high.

Henry Tarratt is slated to take over the penthouse office on the fifth floor of the new administration building which courthouse "jokers" have labeled Tarratt Towers.

Now they are making a few bets whether he will change his mind and take over the higher spot. We won't guess with them.

Municipal Report:

Work Goes on as People Argue

As this is written, final solution of the Menlo Park School District's financial problems and decision of the city council concerning whether or not the state highway commission's proposed freeway route should be approved, are still not made.

Commentary on these topics properly should be made in the editorial columns; factual reports of them at present come under the heading of "current news" rather than "time copy" which a column of this sort is

But while sides are being formed and residents of the school district and city are making up their minds as to what they're going to be for and what they're going to be against, it might be pointed out that the workaday business of both city and school district goes in in spite of the distractions at the top, policymaking levels.

School keeps. And for the city the police, recreation department workers, street and parks department and other civil functionaries continue on their appointed rounds.

Let's see what they're up to:

At the civic center, available officers of the Menlo Park police department currently are giving primary training to four new men, added this week to bring the police force up to its complement.

The force attempts to keep its manpower up to the standard of one officer for every thousand of population, and it doesn't want to turn over law enforcement to new men who need at least some rudimentary training before they can be effective.

About the busiest people at civic center these days are the building inspectors. With more than $2,000,000 in new building started just last month, new "starts" since then, and plans for new projects being brought in every day, they have plenty to do.

They manage to keep pace with both in-office and out-of-office phases of their work in spite of the fact that both "work loads" are heavy.

Mornings are spent in the office, answering the questions of prospective developers and citizens, as well as architects and contractors and afternoons are devoted to on-the-spot inspections of construction going on.

The planning department, as usual, is concerned with a variety of requests—some for variances of one sort or another, others for resubdivisions, and others regarding everything from downtown traffic patterns to annexations of territory not even within the city of Menlo Park at the present time.

Just now, the city's recreation department staff is in a lull, getting ready for the storm.

They're overseeing the maintenance of the equipment and turf at the various parks, in preparation for the usual summer rush. At present, though, things are largely routine.

The street and parks department workers, besides working on the parks, are busy with a variety of street maintenance projects around town. None of them are major ones at this time, however.

The street department got off fairly easily during the winter just past, with few emergencies. New drains installed in all parts of town during the past several years made spring it possible to start spring maintenance without the diversion of having to deal with storm-caused troubles.

The library, as patrons well know, continues to be a busy place; most recent "new project" in evidence is the coming book fair, sponsored by the Friends of the Library. This will be held next month and meanwhile, its organizers are looking for temporary storage space for all the books they hope to collect for the sale.

At the schools?

Well, as usual, as the saying goes, "school keeps."

In every classroom in the district, the youngsters appear to be being kept busy. A visit to the schools will affirm this.

So, on the policy level, talk and argument may go on endlessly. City councils may rise and fall. School boards may be split on policy. Members of audiences may rise to make points or refute statements. Self-ordained orators may expound for hours. The whole thing may grow so confusing that the average citizens listening to it all, may find himself lost in the turgid obfuscation.

But the paid public employees go on about their jobs. They'll continue to do so, unless word filters down from the policymakers to the effect that they should change.

Ravenswood Citcom Panel Talk Tonight

A three-man panel will examine "The Teaching of Moral Values and Responsible Citizenship" as the feature of tonight's Ravenswood City School District Citizen's Advisory Committee meeting.

The public is invited to attend and ask questions following the panel discussion, which begins at 8 p.m. Place is the school administration building, 2160 Euclid Ave., East Palo Alto.

Committee chairman Benjamin Marsh will introduce the panelists.

They are Max M. Van Patten, principal of Mayfield Elementary School in the Palo Alto school district; Dr. L. R. Steig, salary coordinator for the San Francisco Unified School District, and Adolph C. Harrison, College of San Mateo and Capuchino High instructor.

Dr. Steig is also vice president of the western division, Boy Scouts of America.

"The state of California requires that the teaching of morals be a part of the curriculum of elementary schools," Marsh said.

The panel members will discuss what is meant by "morals" and who is responsible for the teaching of these values.

Thanks for Help

Editor, the Recorder:

It is with a warm feeling of appreciation that I am writing to thank you for the excellent editorial on Poison Prevention published in your "Menlo Park Recorder."

The editorial and cartoon plus the advertisement by the Menlo Park Pharmacies has certainly brought to the attention of the citizenry in your area the importance of preventing accidental poisoning.

This is a public service of which you and your staff should be rightly proud. We feel too that it is a year round job to educate the people to proper storage of poisons.

Again we thank you and your staff for their support.

'Monstrous Proposal'

Editor, the Recorder:

A freeway that serves mainly to invite huge influxes of traffic from the East Bay is a montsrous proposal. Our peninsula cities have too much traffic now. If high-speed East Bay traffic is relatively isolated from our locality, we should keep it that way for the benefit of all concerned. Our efforts should be directed toward solving local traffic problems, and not toward spending vast sums to build to build a freeway inviting more thousands of automobiles into our area.

To impose such a freeway on thousands of homeowners, diminishing or destroying their residential values to satisfy the demands of a few industrial interests and real estate speculators, is a willful denial of human rights. Must we have this kind of progress?

Fire District Planned New Station

The files of the Menlo Park Recorder reveal that, 25 years ago this week, the following items, here reproduced exactly as first published, were news in the young community:

April 2, 1937:

Final plans for an Atherton fire station to be erected on Almendral Avenue between Austin Avenue and El Camino Real have been presented to the board of commissioners of the Menlo Park Fire District and have been approved.

Arrangements have been made for the purchase of a station site fronting 75 feet on Almendral Avenue and the contract for the deal will be let soon. The site lies within the narrow boundaries of the Atherton district zoned for business purposes.

It is planned to erect a building of modern design which will conform in appearance with a block of business structures which may be built at a later date.

The contracting firm of Weeden Brothers of Menlo Park has submitted a price for the station based on the final draft of plans and it is understood that no public bids are to be invited, since the fire district is organized under a state law which allows it to proceed without the necessity of calling for bids.

Two stations are already included in the Menlo Park Fire District . . .

Buckingham Sets U. S. 220 Time

A national record was the highlight, but good times and South Peninsula Athletic League records were the standard last Thursday at Menlo-Atherton High School pool in what was the top dual meet so far in the SPAL season. In it, host M-A defeated Woodside 56-38 to share top spot in the SPAL with Palo Alto, both at 3-0. Woodside now is 3-1.

The M-Aites are favorites to keep their record spotless today in an SPAL dual clash at Sequoia. Palo Alto, figured to run right down to the wire with M-A, pays a call at Woodside. Both meets start at 3:15 p.m.

M-A junior Greg Buckingham worte his name in the national ledger with a 2:05.5 in the 220 freestyle, one-tenth of a second off the mark set in 1960 by Los Altos' Steve Clark. Though not a standard prep event, M-A coach Bob Gaughran felt Buckingham had a better chance at the 220 than at the regular 200, in which the national mark is a tough 1:47.9. Buckingham did do the 200 in 1:52.0 for a new league record, six seconds below that set by Sequoia's Jim Miles last season.

Other top performances:

—Buckingham, Bob Laird Bob Plate and John Mortensen set a league freestyle relay record of 1:31.4, just .7 off the national prep mark.

—Mortenson won the 50 free style in 23.0, barely touching out Woodside's Don Roth, the previous league record-holder Roth did a good 23.3.

—Woodside's Gary Fitscher set a school record of 1:09.1 in the 100 breaststroke. Teammate Dick Alberger touched out M-A Bill Estes, both coming in at 1:10.5 for Alberger's fastest time yet. Estes holds the M-A school mark of 1:09.8.

—Julian Krug gave M-A the diving victory with 201.85 points, becoming the first SPAL diver to go over 200 points this season.

Some second bests: Woodside's medley relay team of Jack Schinkle, Fitschen, Art Kauffman and Roth won in 1:49.6, second to M-A's season best;

—M-A's Jon Krug turned in 1:03.0 in his first try at the 100 backstroke, second to Buckingham this year; M-A freshman Dick Roth finished the 400 free style in 4:14.4, two seconds over his own SPAL best. Plate took the 100 butterfly in 56.3, a half second more than his own SPAL top time.

Woodside won the B meet 43½-41½ in the medley relay when Bill Fairbanks came from behind on the anchor lap to win. The Woodside C team also won 54-2.

But it may not become official, since this was a special 220 and isn't included in the repertoire of regular SPAL swim meet events.

39th YEAR—No. 14 THURSDAY, APRIL 5, 1962

Cats Improve, Scorch Paly

Over the hump now, coach Bob Poole's Woodside High Wildcats are looking for that expected good varsity baseball season, having thumped luckless Palo Alto 6-3 Tuesday at Paly and the dangerous but erratic Carlmont Scots waiting for them tomorrow at Burton Park in San Carlos, the game to start at 3:15 p.m.

The Wildcats scored three important firsts in the trimp over Palo Alto. 1. It was their first South Peninsula Athletic League win. 2. Righthander Mitch Paige turned in the first full-route hurling job of the year for Woodside. 3. It was the first game in which the Cats committed fewer errors than their adversaries, in this case none. The flawless fielding also ended the unearned run binge Woodside foes have been feasting on in early games.

Paige surrendered three runs, all worked hard for, struck out 11, gave up seven hits and walked seven in racking up the nod over Paly righthander Steve Boysol, who also lasted the distance with just as impressive figures: six hits, ten strikeouts and only two walks.

The Cats erased a 2-0 Paly margin and took the lead for good with a four-run splurge in the fourth frame, the hitting suddenly coming to life off Boysol. John Morton walked and Rich Edwards, Steve Clark, Bob Lauritzen and Mike Schneider singled in quick order, Schneider getting two RBI with his bingle.

Two more pranced across in the fifth after Morton had walked again. Clark doubled him home with the only extra-base blast of the contest and Forrest Willis singled. Clark scored on an error at shortstop.

Singles by Larry Lomax, Larry Bishop, a walk and Tom Talbott's single produced two Viking runs in the second.

Oaks Return To Diamond On Sour Note

Foothill College's Coast Conference-leading Owl baseballers turned Menlo College's post-spring vacation comeback into a disaster Tuesday at Menlo, scoring almost at will in a 13-2 triumph, called after seven innings by darkness.

The Oaks draw Foothill again tomorrow in another CCJC game, this time with a little practice behind them after the layoff last week. Gametime is is 3 p.m.

Waymon Crowder picked up the victory, going the first six frames and scattering five hits. The Owls' big inning was the fifth, when they got five on walks, passed balls, errors and steals. Dick Hayes got two hits for Menlo.

ONE MUST . . . . . watch one's feet around sliding baserunners when one doesn't have the ball yet, as Woodside catcher John Scott didn't when he danced out of the way of caroming Palo Alto pitcher Steve Boysol Tuesday. Boysol scored the second Paly run but Woodside came back to win 6-3.

Local Cindermen Face Stiff Tests

Now that they have each other out of the way, the Menlo-Atherton and Woodside high trackmen have more rough company on the South Peninsula Athletic League docket, M-A playing host to Cubberley today and Woodside heading for Belmont to meet league-leading Carlmont tomorrow. Both meets start at 3:15 p.m.

Coach Joe Greggans' Woodsiders made a mess of any hopes the Bears had of cracking the winning column last Friday, taking a 78-35 victory at the M-A oval. The Bears came up with something to show for their efforts with a 67-36 class B win, but the Wildcats ran off with the C meet 56-12.

Woodside now has a 2-2 SPAL varsity record. Not only was their won over M-A their second-ever in school history, but their second in a row. The Scots, winners over Palo Alto 56½-54½ by virtue of a final relay victory Friday, have become the team to beat for the league crown. They're 3-0 now. Cubberley was Woodside's first victim and the odds on the Bears winning their first should drop.

The weather was fair and in general that's about all that could be said for the times Friday at M-A. Woodside miler Jim Huff came up with the top effort for SPAL milemen for the day with a good 4:31.3. He hasn't been beaten yet this year.

Woodside middle distance standout Brian Hea didn't set any new marks but nevertheless was the main impetus for the Wildcat varsitymen, taking the 880 in 2:05.6 and the 220 in 22.8, as well as anchoring the winning 880 relay team to a 1:36.3 clocking. M-A's Walt Adkins was the only other varsity double winner, with a 21.3 time in the 180 low hurdles and a 19-10½ broadjump effort.

The Wildcats' Dave Anderson had the best B time of the day, with a 36.8 in the 330.

Bears Also Swim By Washington

"Only" two school records fell Tuesday in Menlo-Atherton High's 69-20 nonleague swimming victory over Washington of San Francisco at the M-A pool. Dick Roth got one in the 100 breaststroke with a 1:07.8, eclipsing teammate Bill Estes' record set two weeks ago of 1:09.8. Estes finished third, behind Washington's Sylvester White, who suffered his first loss of the season in the event.

Bob Plate assaulted the 100 freestyle mark with a 51.7 for the other new school low. Nationally-prominent Greg Buckingham took the 100 backstrke with a good 58.2 for M-A, despite a Washington swimmer coming into his lane and bumping him.

Best B time was Gordy Gourlin's 57.7 in the 100 free, his first try at it, in M-A's 43-39 victory. Washington took the C meet 27-16.

Paly Clobbers M-A Ovalmen

Winning almost everything, Palo Alto High shattered Menlo-Atherton's hopes for their first track win Tuesday at the Paly cinders, clubbing the Bears 93-29. M-A won the B affair 70-43 and Jordan Junior High claimed the C meet with 49 points to M-A's 23 and Paly's six.

Walt Adkins tied with Paly's Frank Tarrantts in the high jump at 5-6 and ran on the winning Bear 880 relay team in the only bright spots for the Menlo varsity.

Mike Meri won the shot and discus and Tilton Thomas the broadjump and highjump to spearhead the Bear B triumph. The Bears, however, took most of the first places to win going away, with Mike Meri winning twice in the weights—a 42-2¾ shot put and 105.4 discus throw.

Wildcat Netters Get Good Start

It'll be potent Woodside High against potent Palo Alto High in the South Peninsula Athletic League feature tennis match tomorrow at Palo Alto, starting at 3:15 p.m.

The Woodsiders easily clubbed Carlmont 6-1 in their SPAL opener last Friday at Woodside to move their season record to 4-0. Palo Alto drew the league bye.

The Cats lost only the No. 5 singles to Carlmont, but by then had the meet wrapped up. And that might have gone differently had No. 4 singles man Mike Hall been healthy and able to play.

Torry Bryant took No. 1 singles in a frantic two sets, 7-5 and 12-10 over Carlmont's Ralph McArther, the weak Scots' main hope. After that all the Cat victories came in two sets, except in No. 4 singles, where Ron Reis took three to turn back Carlmont's Bill Lazarus, 6-2, 3-6, 6-3.

Twins Bill and John Roberts had the best doubles effort of the day, winning 6-1, 6-4.

Cubberley Waits:

Win Still Eludes M-A

Unless their pitching starts coming around, it's going to get much rougher for coach Frank Bettencourt's Menlo-Atherton High varsity baseball nine before the new South Peninsula Athletic League season drags to a dreary close.

A lot of people have gone around the bases on M-A's pitching in their two SPAL games, seven of them Tuesday in the Bears' 7-5 loss to the Sequoia Cherokees at Sequoia, to make M-A's current SPAL record 0-2.

Unwhipped Cubberley is the next battler the Bears must face, with a 3:15 p.m. encounter slated for the Flood Park diamond tomorrow. Cubberley has the pitching, but any news is beginning to look like bad news around here.

The Cherokees literally walked away from the Bears Tuesday, gathering in ten free passes off two M-A hurlers but only five hits, while the Bears were chipping away at righthander Jim Franco for ten.

M-A took a momentary 4-2 lead in the third inning when Bill King singled to the infield and scored on two errors and Cliff Gamble came home on a Bobo Wallace singleton.

The Bruins gave it right back in the Sequoia third when letty Jim King went wild and passed four straight Sequoia stickers and then surrendered a two-run single to Jack Ferguson. The Tribe had tied it up 2-2 in the second when Bear centerfielder Gus Bayle let a Ferguson single go through his legs for a two-run homer.

The unhappiness continued in the fourth, with King going out after walking Franco and righthander Dave Olerich shuttling in to the hill. But Olerich's welcome was exceptionally rude. After walking the first two batters he faced to load the sacks, Tribe catcher Mike Otis uncorked a two-run single for the deciding Sequoia tallies.

Otis wasn't as hot behind the plate as he was over it. The rapid-running Bears swiped eight bases for the day.

Done In Again:

Campaign Gets Rough for Trojans; Sequoia Looms Next

It would be a mighty upset, but the Ravenswood High Trojans will be looking for it tomorrow in their SPAL varsity baseball engagement at Sequoia, where battle will be joined at 3:15 p.m.

So far, coach Tom Rivera's anemic-looking Trojans haven't lit up the skies with their brilliance, as for instance that 7-0 thing they were the victims of at Cubberley Tuesday, which represented their second SPAL loss in as many tries, just as it was the second success for the Cougars in a ditto number.

The trouble was that the Trojans couldn't get the key hit off Cougar righthander Henry Newman, who doled out five safeties and fanned five.

The Cougars collected nine off losing righthander George Raybon, but the one by shortstop Ray Gale in the fifth was all they really needed. Gale slammed a Raybon pitch halfway to Sunnyvale, his second homer in two games.

Jim Tabor got two hits for the Trojans, as did Gale, Dave Edrington and Ron Fihn for the winners.

The Cougs added three more runs in the sixth on four hits and two glaring errors, one an extra-baser in the outfield.

Pony League:

SIGNUPS

Signups for 13-14 year-old prospective baseball players interested in playing in the South Peninsula Pony League this summer will be taken Saturday morning, starting at 9, at Burgess gym in the Menlo Park Civic Center.

Also still needed are coaches and managers. These also should attend the meeting.

This will be the second year of operation for the league, which last year included two teams from Menlo Park, two from East Palo Alto and two from Palo Alto.

FREMONT RECORD

The Fox and Fox Chevy from Menlo Park set a new CG (for gas coupes and sedans) track record at Fremont Drag Strip Sunday, clocking the quarter mile in 13.02 seconds and 107.72 m.p.h. Another Menlo winner was Dave Schmitz in his Chevy in the SSA class (stock cars, stick shift), which did 106.94 m.p.h. in 13.43 seconds.

The Muddy Frosh-Soph Picture:

Bears Take a Tumble

Biggest question of the week in South Peninsula Athletic League frosh-soph baseball circles—: What has happened to the preseason favorite Menlo-Atherton Bears?

The Bruins suffered two inglorious setbacks in their first two SPAL games, six errors leading to a 6-1 setback at Sequoia Tuesday and a two-run seventh giving Carlmont a 5-4 thriller over them in their opener Friday.

Woodside and Ravenswood the other local contestants, are 1-1 as of now. Woodside's Wildcats managed just one hit in bowing to Cubberley's Bryan Winnovich and Bob Taylor Friday but came back with a seven-hit outburst to smother Palo Alto Tuesday 10-4 behind freshman righthander Cris Courter's four-hitter. The Trojans from Ravenswood got a premier pitching and hitting performance from lefty Ricky Deutscher to humble Paly 7-5 in eight innings Friday but slowed to a walk in a 9-1 loss to Cubberley Tuesday.

M-A tries again at Cubberley tomorrow, Woodside tests Carlmont up there and Ravenswood goes to Sequoia — all three of the locals' opponents are unbeaten currently. All games begin at 3:15 p.m.

Sequoia hurlers Paul Compagna and Bill DeVita combined for a two-hitter to stop M-A Tuesday, with a four-run second inning giving Compagna the victory. Two walks, two errors on one double-play ball and three hits, including a two-run double by Bill Ruder, rounded out the picnic.

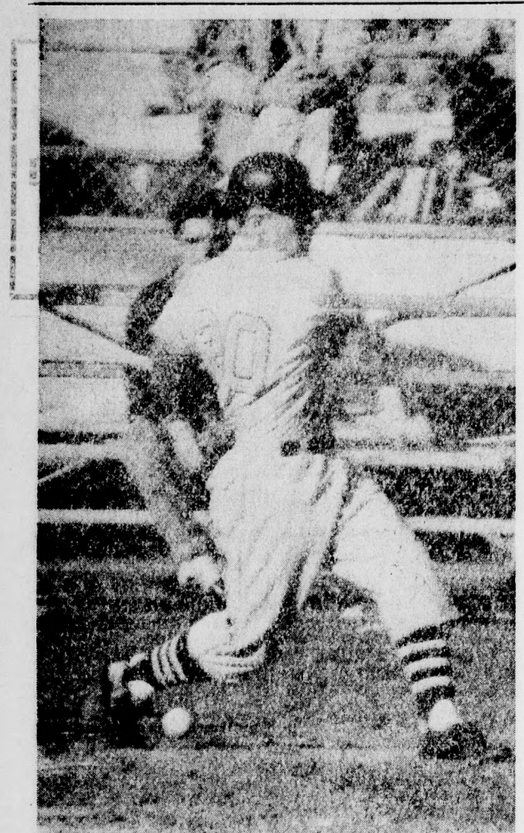

Righthander John Hofferd was the loser. Outfielder Danny Gibson scored the only M-A run, that in the first, when Rod Pommes filed out with the bags loaded. Dick Burrill also tried to score from second but was thrown out to end the threat.

Carlmont righthander Al Smith cuffed the Bears on four hits in his victory Friday. Righthander Ernie Berg lost this one after relieving Burrill in the sixth.

Courter out-chucked Paly's Barry Carlson Tuesday, both going all the way in Woodside's victory. The Cats got four runs in the third, two coming on Steve Ford's single, which the leftfielder let go through his legs for a homer. A pair of walks and singles by Ford, Jim Curtice, Dick Kemmerle and Dick Barkley got the Cats five more in the fifth. Ford and Curtice led the seven-hit Cat attack with two singles each, with frosh Tad d'Arc doing a god job at third base.

Deutscher struck out 13 Paly batters Friday in going the route. Each club got five hits, but Deutscher got one of them, a single, to go with two Paly infield errors in the eighth that brought in the winning Trojan tallies.

Things went poorly Tuesday in the face of Tom Everest's five-hitter and all the Cubberley regulars getting at least one hit. Bill Berg and Rick Kuhta slugged homers for the winners. Kuhta's coming on the first pitch of the game. Righthander Ron Ban was the loser.

NEARLY . . .
. . . bouncing the ball off his own foot (next to his right foot), Menlo-Atherton shortstop Lee Buckingham fouled off a Fred Reynders pitch in the Bears' SPAL baseball debut against Carlmont Friday at Burgess Park. Some debut. The Bears lost 13-8 in eight innings.

It Didn't Get Dark Soon Enough For M-A; Scots Boom in 8th

It was much darker out for the Menlo-Atherton High Bears than it was for the Carlmont Scots shortly after sunset Friday evening at Burgess Park when their South Peninsula Athletic League varsity baseball opener finally ground to a close in the gathering gloom. With the sun going fast, the Scots had clubbed Bear losing hurler Jim Yancey for five runs in the eighth inning and Carlmont righthanded fireballer Steve Caria had set the Bruins down 1-2-3 on blazers they probably couldn't see to send the Scots home with a 13-8 victory.

The lead changed hands four times in the regulation seven frames. M-A tied it 5-5 in the last of the fifth and went ahead 7-5 in the sixth. Carlmont pranced three runs across in the seventh, all off Yancey, and it looked like curtains. But the Bears pulled their patented double steal with men on first and third, having gotten there on Scot errors, and got away with it, the run scored and the extra inning came up.

But the Bears wish it hadn't. The Scots' Rick Brown hit a ground-rule double into the plowed ground behind right field and Caria tripled him home. Randy Shields singled in Caria, Chuck Hunt singled and then Arnold Gilpin powdered a home-run ball over left-fielder Dave Havard's head and it was over.

Righthander Bob Chaffet went the first five innings for the Bears, walked seven and gave up four hits. Yancey, not up to par, was bombed for eight hits in the last three cantos and passed five. Each struck out three.

Caria struck out four in the two innings he worked and was the winner. Ron Fell had started for Carlmont, with Fred Reynders coming on in the second during a three-run M-A outburst. Carlmont outhit the Bears 12-7 but also outerrored them 7-0.

Wildcats Drop SPAL Debut To Cubberley

Cubberley shortstop Ray Gale, the second batter up in the first inning, pickled a Forrest Willis fastball into the centerfield boondocks and started a six-run uprising that left the Woodside Wildcats for dead and gave Cubberley an 11-5 decision in the South Peninsula Athletic League varsity baseball opener for the two clubs Friday at Woodside.

Third sacker Jack Peters and outfielder Ron Fihn slugged a double and single, respectively, each good for two RBI, before the big inning was over. Five of the runs were unearned.

Cougar righthander Wayne Miller lived up to expectations despite all the help. Miller fanned 15 Wildcats, walked seven and allowed seven hits in his route-going performance.

Willis and big Harvey Shank were his only nemeses at the plate, Willis socking a homer and double and Shank reaching him for a triple and two singles. Miller fanned the side in the second and seventh, the latter feat cutting a rally off at two runs.

Willis, a senior lefty and main hope of the Cat mound corps, lasted until the fourth, when righthander Mitch Paige came into put down a Cougar blast. Shank, another righthander, hustled in an inning later to get Paige out of a scrape that had Cubberley netting three more runs. The Cougars collected only six hits, two off each Woodside hurler, but combined with five Woodside errors, these produced only five earned runs.

11 Miscues Wipe Out Troy's Chance

Ravenswood High's Trojans hit and scored runs, but couldn't cope with their own errors, going down to an 8-7 defeat by the Palo Alto Vikings Friday in their South Peninsula Athletic League season opener at Palo Alto.

Jim Tabor and George Raybon allowed only five Viking hits. But walks and 11 errors by Trojans who had performed sities which clash tomorrow at games were too much. Raybn took the defeat and Jon Crestarolo, touched for eight hits, won it.

Harry McMillen led the Trojan hit parade with a solid three-for-three, including a two-run home run to deep left-center field. He also stroked two singles.

Jim Smith slapped a pair of hits as did Gary Shouse. Bob Guillena had the other local bingle.

Ravenswood held a 4-3 advantage after two innings and made it 6-3 when McMillen swatted his four-master with Guillena aboard in the fourth frame. The ball rolled all the to the Ravenswood track as McMillen cruised around the bases.

Paly scored once on the fifth and three times in the sixth to go ahead 7-6. The Trojans rallied for a pair in their half of the frame. But McMillen, trying to score on a hit by Smith, was called out in a disputed play at the plate to end the inning.

Raybon had been firing the ball well, but errors had kept him in hot water. The Trojan righthander appeared to tire in the seventh. He walked Steve Adams and Jim Williams—who stole second and third and came across on Larry Lomax' single.

Bellarmine Relay Crown Goes to Ravenswood Bs

Last week was eventful — and busy — for Ravenswood High track and field athletes.

The outstanding B team won the Bellarmine Relays title Saturday after having whipped Menlo-Atherton and Sequoia High lightweight teams during the week. The Trojan margin over Galileo of San Francisco in the Bellarmine event was 36-30.

And the Trojan varsity marked up their first SPAL dual meet victory of the campaign. They edged Menlo-Atherton 57-55 with a victory in the relay — last event of the meet. However, Sequoia firsts in the discus and relay pulled them past the Trojans last Friday for a 61-52 victory.

Trojan C performers, despite good efforts by Varrie Booker, lost both SPAL meets. M-A topped them 45-32 and Sequoia won 55-22.

All three teams return to action against powerful Palo Alto Friday at the Viking field Ravenswood has completed its home stand and all future track meets will be on the road Meet time is 3:15 p.m.

Trojan mentor Steve Barooshian said he'll keep Bob Washington, Len Wiley and Willie Webster, who often run with the varsity, in the B division and shoot for the lightweight title in this meet.

Washington was declared the top B athlete at the Bellarmine Relays, which featured hundreds of track performers from the bay area.

He took second in the broad jump with a 20-7 leap and ran the third leg of the victorious B sprint medley relay team.

The team was composed of Jim Bradley (220), Ray Johnson (110), Washington (110) and Willie Webster (440). Webster brought the baton across the finish line in 1:43.0. Willow Glen was second.

Another first was posted by the excellent four-man low hurdle team. Taking the blue ribbon in this 480-yard relay event were Ron Peres, Milky Johnson, Dwight Turner and and Ray Johnson, running in that order. They were clocked in 59.4 seconds, well ahead of second-place Cupertino.

Also scoring points was the 440-yard relay team which placed third after winning their heat in 46.5. Ray Johnson, Erv Eley, Turner and Washington carried the baton.

And Willie Webster equalled his best pole vault of the season by tieing for second at 10-8 in the B event for more points.

SEQUOIA MEET

Williams was a double-winner for Ravenswood, taking the varsity high hurdles in 16.4 and the 180 lows in 21.5 — but Horace White's big triple for the Cherokees was too much for the locals.

White won the 100 in 10 flat, the 220 in 22.1 and the broad jump at 21-11.

Other varsity winners for Ravenswood were Bill Robinson, 880 (2:09.5); Grandy, high jump (5-8); Cheney, 440 (53.1); Chester Prince, shot put (46-9); Willie Webster, pole vault (tie for first at 9-6).

In Class B, the standouts were double winners Ron Peres 70 yard high hurdles and 120 yard lows (9.9 and 14.3); Len Wiley, 660 and high jump (1:30.7 and 5-5); Jim Bradley, 75 yard dash and broad jump (8.3 and tie with Eley at 19.4) and Frank Rouse, shot and discus (40-7½ and 100-6).

M-A Netters Open SPAL Successfully

Turning quite a trick, coach Art Boettcher's Menlo-Atherton High tennis team outlasted Cubberley 4-3 Friday at the M-A courts to get a good jump in the South Peninsula Athletic League opening round and at the same time collect their first victory of the season after two setbacks.

Tomorrow the Bears play host to Sequoia High, 7-0 victors over San Carlos last week in their SPAL bow. Tuesday they'll meet SPAL title favorite Palo Alto at Paly. Both matches will start at 3:15 p.m.

The all-sophomore first singles Friday had Cubberley's George Todd nipping M-A's Doug Dawson 6-3, 6-3, but from there the Bears held their own, losing only third singles and first doubles.

Dave Brown snuck by Cubberley veteran Ralph Rutherford 3-6, 6-2, 6-3 in the most nerve-wracking singles match. Frank Pipgras and Bob Mong took the second doubles easily for M-A, outpointing Bob Newell and Jeff Warner, 6-1, 6-0.

It didn't go so well Tuesday at the home courts, where Bellarmine took a 4-3 nonleague decision from the Bears in an odd six singles, one doubles ladder. Jeff Kraut and Mike Senerin defeated M-A's Dawson and Gene Sokolski 6-8, 6-2, 6-2 to decide the meet after the two teams had split the singles.

Menlo's Steve Berg nipped Pete Caserta 4-6, 6-4, 9-7 in the most harrowing singles match of the day.

Tigers Take Rec Cage Championship

The Tigers are champions of the Menlo Park Recreation Department's high school recreation basketball league, completing the season with a pair of victories in closing games last Wednesday and Thursday nights at Menlo-Atherton High Schol gym to bring their record to 10-2.

Jack Callison led the Tigers with 22 points in their 67-50 victory over the Raiders in the season finale Thursday. Pete Iverson and Tom Donnelly each had 12 for the Tigers. Rich Silverman had 18 and Rick Kopf 12 for the Raiders.

The Saints forfeited to the Rebels and the Muskrats did likewise to the Solexes in Thursday's other scheduled games. The league began in January but since then many of the players have joined spring sports teams and under school rules can't compete in two organized sports at once, so dropped basketball.

The result was a shortage of players Thursday in these two games, as well as the Muskrats' 2-0 forfeit to the Raiders Wednesday.

In the other two games Wednesday, Iverson led the Tigers to a 78-59 decision over the Solexes, scoring 30 points on the way, 20 in the second half. Callison had 24 for the winners and Steve Hughes 16. Kopf got 23 for the Solexes and Dan Moore 12.

The Rebels whipped the Jets 50-48 in overtime in the other game, but because they used players who weren't regulars on the team the Rebels officially forfeited the contest. Bill Oney sank the winning bucket for the Rebels in the overtime. George Davis of the Jets was game high scorer with 22 counters, with Ray Larson adding 14. Dale Porath led the Rebels with 14 and Randy Burke got 12.

The final standings: Tigers 10-2, Raiders 8-4, Saints 8-4, Jets 6-6, Rebels 6-6, Muskrats 4-8, Solexes 1-11.

The Tigers copped the championship by winning their last six games in a row, going unbeaten through the entire second round of the double round-robin schedule.

Hours for the adult volleyball program have been revised somewhat on Mondays because the new diet and exercise class will be using the Ravenswood Recreation and Park District gym, Mrs. Joanne Berry, recreation specialist, announced.

Mrs. Berry said the volleyball group now meets from 7:30 to 9 p.m. For six weeks, beginning April 9, they'll get together from 7 to 8:30 p.m., she said.

In the Garden:

Herbs—A Gourmet's Guide to Gardening

The man who grows herbs within easy reach of his kitchen is one who enjoys the better things of life. Like the home vegetable gardener, he knows the culinary pleasures which are unattainable to the cook who buys only from the neighborhood grocer.

With herbs, it is nice just to crush the leaves and sniff them as you pass by in the garden. But it is pure joy to pinch a spot of basil for a last minute addition to the soup pot, to garnish fried chicken with leaves of thyme or to freshen an iced drink with a sprig of mint.

The space required for growing herbs is so small that no garden should be without its share of these wonderful kitchen accessories. Herbs grow beautifully in pots or plant boxes. Indeed, herb growing is an art which even the apartment dweller can pursue provided he has access to a sunny window box or some small space either on the roof or in the backyard of his apartment house.

Starting an herb garden has become vastly simpler in the past decade or so, thanks to increased attention given this problem. Where once it was necessary to grow herbs from seed it is now possible to find well started plants in nurseries. This not only simplifies the process immeasurably but enables you to avoid that awful excess of plants which seeding invariably results in.

For the bedding herbal enthusiast there are six or eight standbys as a start: Parsley, which many consider more a vegetable than herb, chives, thyme, rosemary, basil, sage, marjoram and mint are readily available and always in demand by cooks. As your interest expands you can try savory, tarragon, caraway, dill and many others, though some of them may be found only from seed.

Most herbs are better and more aromatic if the soil they are planted in is on the poorer side. This does not mean they don't like attention, however, for as with all herbaceous plants, they do best when they get plenty of water and sun. They may be cut in late summer and dried by hanging upside down. But herbs are always best when picked fresh from the garden and used within minutes of that time.

Comedia Lists One-Act Play Contest Titlists

The two winning plays in the Comedia Repertory Company's original one-act play contest have been announced. The plays are going into rehearsal this week and will be presented on Monday evenings after the closing of the current production of Ibsen's "A Doll's House."

One play is a comedy by Ronald Poze entitled "A Way to Happiness." Poze, a medical student at Stanford, has been writing for several years as a hobby.

The other winner is an unusual play entitled "Hide and Go Seek" by Thomas Taylor, who lives in Daly City.

The plays are presented by the Monday Evening Series at the Comedia Theater, 1300 El Camino Real, Menlo Park. Admission is free to the general public and no reservations are necessary.

The current production of "A Doll's House" is scheduled for one more performance, April 9.

Red Cross Lists Class In Lifesaving

A new "pilot" course in a refresher for life saving will be offered April 10 and 12 from 7-10 p.m. at Sequoia High School pool for swimmers who have a senior life saving certificate dated 1958 or later.

Previously it has been necessary to take a 17-hour course in order to renew the certificate, according to Miss Ruth Olds, chairman of the water safety committee of the Red Cross, sponsors of the course.

Mrs. Robert McClure of Menlo Park will instruct the course. Size of the class is limited so early registration by calling the Red Cross at EM 6-3851 is suggested.

Large Comedia Troupe Scores A Hit With 'Bells Are Ringing'

Although it took them a little while to get with it, Comedia Repertory Company did come through with a sparkling performance of "Bells Are Ringing" to a jammed opening night house at the Comedia Theater in Menlo Park Saturday night.

The Betty Comden-Adolph Green musical comedy was a smattering of happy nonsense about a girl who finds her true love over the telephone, but which is wrapped around her good works in helping others find happiness.

Husky-voiced Lila Lloyd made the whole thing go with a starting display of versatility and warmth. She did everything from torch songs to the most raucous slapstick with equal ease.

She got plenty of help from Allen Praefke, the down-trodden playwright, who can dance and sing a fair tune, too. If anything, Praefke underplayed the part a little, although he too picked up the tempo along with the rest of the cast as the action unrolled.

Victor Miller was an irascible Sandor, who sets up a recording company as a front for a bookie organization and led the chorus in the funniest number of the show, "It's A Simple Little System," in which racetracks were code-named after famous composers.

But characters abounded. Ray Kash was Inspector Barnes and Wally Sumpter his sidekick, in parts that were too unpoliceman-like to be anything but funny. Joe Brusanti broke up the crowd continuously as the dentist-turned-songwriter, Lynne Chatterton was appropriately giddy as the owner of the telephone answering service (Susanswerphone) (Ugh!) who is taken in by Sandor and Rick Longshore was very like Presley, man, when he cut loose.

Charles Graziani is a fine dancer, leading a highly-entertaining "Mu-cha-cha" number.

The huge cast (23 listed on the program, all in more than one part) and the frequent costume changes (at least 150) called for some backstage enginuity, but then Comedia hasn't failed yet, and this was no exception. King Hall's settings got a real workout but proved to be as tough as they were utilitarian.

Jeanne Rich Schultz's costuming was tasteful and quick —some of the actors were completely changed and back on stage in less than one minute.

Mary Alyce handled the choreography, as usual very capably.

"Bells Are Ringing" will be playing Saturday nights at the Comedia Theater. The sorority alumnae group that took in last Saturday night's show as part of its reunion celebration loved it to a raucous degree. The average audience will find it no less enjoyable.

Band Wants Woodwind Musicians

Several types of woodwind players are the first need when Peninsula Community Band begins spring quarter practices, bandmaster Nathan Chasin has announced.

A number of B flat clarinet openings exist for experienced musicians. Single positions are available for advanced players of bassoon, oboe, E flat soprano and alto clarinet. Bassoons and alto clarinet can be furnished to applicants, Chasin said.

One French horn player is needed in the band's brass section. At present, there are no brass and percussion section vacancies. A French horn can be supplied to the instrumentalist.

Spring session rehearsals begin Monday, April 9, at 7:30 p.m. in room 127 of Palo Alto High School, El Camino Real at Embarcadero Road.

Musicians who are interested in joining the band and can attend most Monday practices may apply to band manager Robert L. Holland, DA 6-5628, evenings.

Professional, military or college experience in symphonic bands or orchestras is desirable, since Community Band is an advanced group. The band sight-reads and interprets classical, musical comedy, march music, etc.

Men, women and music student residents of the Peninsula are eligible to join.

'SEESAW' PLAYS FRIDAYS

The romantic comedy about a Bronx girl who brings a few months of love, understanding, and humor into the life of a lonely Nebraska lawyer, is now in its third month of performances. It played for over two years in New York.

MENLO PARK'S GREATEST SALE!

James Flood's mansion, Linden Towers (above), was the most lavish of all the opulent country homes established in the Menlo Park area during the late years of the 19th century. Menlo Park had its beginnings in that era of the so-called Nabobs, "the gold encrusted aristocracy of Nob Hill," first as a village serving their estates, later evolving into an outstanding residential community in its own right.

This special Nabob Value Days edition, recalling the lustre of bygone days, has been prepared with great care—and a little fun—by participating merchants of Menlo Park and the staff of the Menlo Park Recorder. The flamboyant style of many of the advertisements was modelled on actual publications of those high and far-off times. Good for a nostalgic chuckle, perhaps, but more than that: The values offered here by Menlo Park's modern merchants are worth a Bonanza to you!

Mid-Peninsula Residents Always 'Made the News'

As long as Menlo Park has been here, the people of the community have been making news. Sometimes it isn't big news, but there always has been something going on that has made its way into the newspapers.

The first regular coverage of Menlo Park and environs by a newspaper was that afforded by the San Mateo County Times-Gazette, founded in 1859 in Redwood City.

Until 1893 the Times-Gazette correspondent, name unknown, wrote his columns of chit-chat under a regular heading that said only "Menlo Park." The Times-Gazette's other county correspondents did the same, under the headings of their various communities.

But in the April 8, 1893 issue of the weekly paper, the most prolific and colorful of all chroniclers of early Menlo Park began his weekly contributions. He was Henry C. Hall, one of the first two teachers hired by the Menlo Park School District at its founding in 1830 and who rose to become president of the county board of education in 1893.

Hall, well-known as a dynamic educator who could get the most from his students, apparently was prominent enough that when his column started it was put under a headline that read "Menlo Park Matters," with a two-line subhead that said "Notes from the Village of Beautiful Residences." Under that would be three lines of small headline type proclaiming the various subjects contained in the column.

It's also interesting to note that Hall's writings began the week after the brothers James T. and Dennis E. O'Keefe bought the Times-Gazette from Frank H. Owen.

Both Hall and his predecessor were conventional types who often assumed that their readers would know what or whom they were talking about without an explanation in the story. That's why we find items such as "The new express office is being built by MacBain and Ferguson." What new express office and who MacBain and Ferguson were apparently wasn't considered newsworthy.

We also find that "Many from Menlo Park will go in to see the great football game." Need he have said more?

But more typical of Hall's style:

"Miss May Golder of San Francisco is the guest of the Misses Maloney. It is with pleasure that we say that the charms of our gentle visitor have not been in the least impaired since her last visit to Menlo. Miss Golder has many accomplishments, and being blessed with a pleasant disposition together with a real, handsome countenance, her ascent to the summit of the social world was easy. She is now looked upon as one of the fairest ornaments in the best society of the great metropolis. This is a Menlo girl, born, reared and educated to a great extent in the village. Of course all the young ladies of Menlo Park are very attractive and this accounts for the fact that there are no old maids among us. In this respect we are fortunate; but the woods are full of old bachelors. From that unhappy state, O Lord deliver us!"

Miss Golder made regular visits to Menlo Park and always got this treatment from Henry.

Then there was: "Miss Kitty Welch of San Francisco is the guest of Miss Maggie V. Maloney." And: "Two enthusiastic disciples of Ike Walton, Faxon Atherton and Shano Felix, sought the vicinity of Page's mill in search of speckled beauties during the week, the result was the catch of 100 trout of the usual size."

Obviously there were no trout limits to worry about then. And commuters wondering where Page Mill Road in Palo Alto got its name need only to follow it to its western terminus today to find where the two nimrods went fishing in 1893.

Hall gave some insight into his own personality one week when he listed a group of "honors" voted to teachers at a San Mateo County Teachers Institute held in Redwood City. He was voted "Most Fascinating Smiler."

Although social items and the lighter moments of the village's 175 residents were Hall's stock in trade for his newsbeat, we also find out many tidbits about how the town itself was developing. He writes: "The avenue leading from Duff & Doyle's to the depot is to be turnpiked. This is a step in the right direction as the avenue which is one of the principal streets in town has been in bad condition for years." He was talking about Santa Cruz Ave. between what is now El Camino Real and the S.P. depot on Merrill St.

Some of the seamier and sometimes ludricrous aspects of that day's simpler life also come to light in Hall's columns. On August 5, 1893, Hall wrote: "F. A. Gegenbaur, the druggist, having secured the services of a first-class pharmacist, will, on the first of next week, take a course of medicinal instructions at Cooper's Medical College, San Francisco. Mr. Gegenbaur has already taken a two years' course in Heidelberg, Germany, where he studied under his uncle, A. Gegenbaur, the widely-known and talented physician of Germany. Mr. Gegenbaur has shown considerable skill in surgery while here, having had many cases in which he was successful, an dwill begin his profession under most favorable auspices.

Then in the September 2 issue, just four weeks later, we see: "Dr. Gegenbaur had his first surgery case Monday. J. A. Donohoe Jr. is the owner of an Irish setter valued at $500. The dog in jump through the conservatory its leg cut so that eight stitc were sewed by the doctor."

Churches an Integral Part of Life From Area's Earliest Beginnings

The earliest esttlers of the Menlo Park area, like those of other parts of the state of California, were men of deep religious sentiment who began construction of places of worship almost as soon as they completed their homes.

Later settlers, too, were men of deep religious conviction. They numbered among them some of the barons of the Comstock who once — after a disastrous fire levelled a previous church in Virginia City — collected enough money to rebuild it at a single meeting of the congregation.

Most of the earliest pioneers here were men and women of the Catholic faith.

In the Menlo Park area, settlement and the growth of religious institutions were hand in hand.

One of the earliest settlers in the area, Dennis Martin, who arrived in the area after crossing the continent in 1846, set up a Catholic church — St. Denis' — in this area 10 years later.

The church was located on Martin's ranch near the present intersection of Sand Hill and Walsh Roads, on what is now Stanford land. It was the first Catholic church between Mission Santa Clara and Mission Dolores in San Francisco.

FIRST CHURCH . . .
. . . to be constructed between the missions at Santa Clara and San Francisco was St. Denis', built in 1856 by Dennis Martin and situated near Sand Hill Road. A marker along the latter thoroughfare now indicates the site. The church was abandoned after a few years; it was succeeded by the Church of the Nativity in Menlo Park. Illustration above is from a painting by Rachel Bentley.

Although early records are no longer compiete, it is known that it was constructed for a congregation of 150 persons.

That attendance was good is indicated by surviving "pew rent" books, which indicate that the lumbermen who worked in the hills of the Searsville and Woodside areas brought their religion with them to the then-primitive area.

SHORT HISTORY

The church lasted only a few years. Then Martin lost title to the land and the church was forced to close.

The redwood "shake" chapel fell into disrepair and in the ensuing years the lumber was carted off and put to other uses.

Some of St. Denis' original fixtures survive, however: The six tall candlesticks and a crucifix now at the Church of the Nativity are originally from the earlier place of worship.

Next church to be constructed in the area was the Church of the Nativity, originally situated at what is now the intersection of Middlefield and Ringwood Roads.

The building was constructed by James R. Doyle in 1872.

Later, in 1877, after serving as a school house as well as a church during its early years, the church was moved to its present site facing Oak Grove Avenue.

So well constructed was the original building that all that was necessary to keep pace with the growing congregation was the lengthening of the original unit; the steeple and sanctuary were added in 1880 adn in 1893 the transept was built.

Originally, in 1872, the Church of the Nativity was a mission of the San Mateo parish. It became independent when it was moved in 1877, and at that time "took over" as a mission an existing church in Mayfield.

CHANGES

The parish served by Church of the Nativity has changed through the years, too. At one time, after Mayfield became part of the Mountain View parish, it included Palo Alto and Portola Valley.

In 1950 the last subdivision of the parish, at El Camino Real, meant the church served mainly eastern portions of Atherton and Menlo Park. As the population has grown, these subdivisions have become necessary for the accommodation of more people.

Last year, the old St. Denis parish was reactivated and now serves the Sharon Heights area — the same one served by the original St. Denis', 100 years ago.

Life In Menlo, 1890 . . .

Nothing is more delightful to a reader than to find his own town or section of the country mentioned in a book through which he is browsing.

Menlo Park receives a great deal more than casual mention in "The Californians" written by Gertrude Atherton and published in the early 1890's.

The plot, essentially a love story, concerns the daughters of an American and a Spanish-American family who lived in San Francisco, taking their holidays, weekends and summer vacations in Menlo Park.

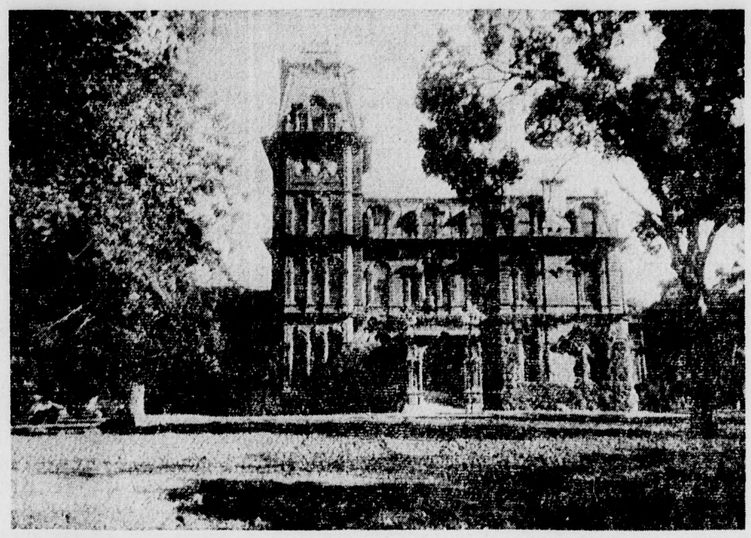

INTERIOR DESIGN

One passage from the novel describes a typical parlour of the time saying, "The walls of the parlour were tinted a pale buff, the ceilings frescoed with cherubs and flowers. On the great plate-glass windows were curtains of dark red velvet trimmed with gold fringe. The large square pieces of furniture were upholstered in red velvet. The floor was covered with a red Brussels carpet with a design of squirming devil-fish. Three or four small chairs were covered with Indian embroidery and there were two Chinese tables of teakwood and mottled marble. Gas having been an afterthought, the pipes were visible, although painted to match the walls."

Those who had second estates in Menlo Park built a very exclusive society — even more exclusive than the social life they created in San Francisco.

Reports Miss Atherton, "Menlo Park relegated slang to unknown millions who said 'mommer' and 'popper,' got divorces and used cosmetics." She describes a Bonanza queen who "having heard much of the simplicity of the worshipful Menlo Park folk, had paid her first calls in a blue silk wrapper, but conceiving that she had done the wrong thing, sheltered her perplexities in black silk thereafter. Her

The home was situated on an estate which occupied the area bounded by San Francisquito Creek, Ravenswood Avenue, Middlefield Road and the railroad tracks. Built in 1870, it was not occupied after the earthquake of 1906 and was finally razed in the early 1940's to make room for Dibble Hospital, the latter still partially occupied as Stanford Village and as laboratory units of Stanford Research Institute.

...Author Tells of Sumptuous Days

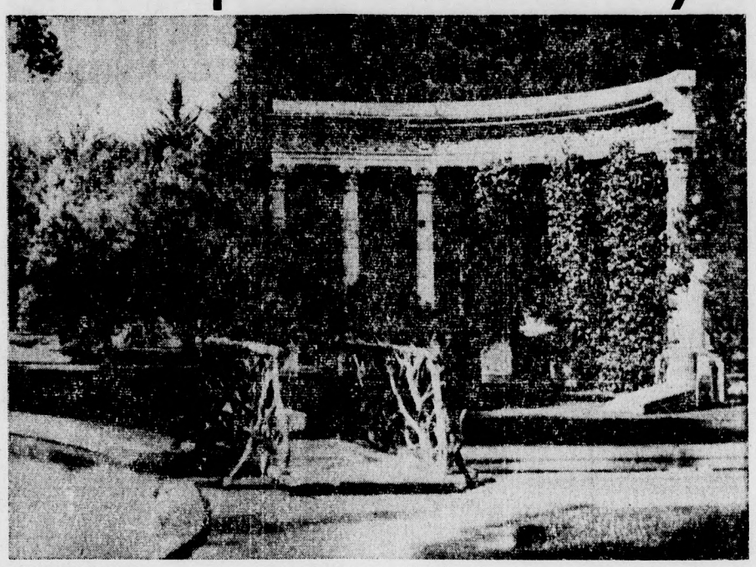

(Cont'd from preceding page) daughter upon the same occasion had worn a voluminous frock of pale blue camel's hair trimmed with flounces of Valenciennes lace, that being the simplest frock in her wardrobe."

Menlo Park residents were proud of the woods that characterized the area, according to the authoress, and compared them with those at Fontainbleau, and unfavorably with the English woods where they claimed it was necessary for a lady of fashion to wear a veil lest she become freckled.

Yerba is the name Gertrude Atherton has chosen for her Spanish family and Fair Oaks the name of their estate. The American girl, Helena Belmont in the story, is described as a great belle, with audaciousness, selfishness and extravagance expected in an 1890 charmer.

And in one passage of "The Californians," Helena is described as keeping Menlo Park in a whirl of excitement. "Bath houses were built and the big char-a-bancs rolled down the dusty road to Ravenswood every morning . . . She gave dances and picnics on alternate weeks and her hospitality in the matter of luncheons and dinners was unbounded. The Colonel (her father) built a bowling alley and a proper tennis courts. . . . Several times Helena persuaded the owner of the stage line between Redwood City and La Honda to let her drive; and she took a select few of her friends to the top of the lumbering coach, relegating the uneasy passengers to the stuffy interior." "The road," the narrative continues, "is one of the most picturesque in California, but the grades are steep, the turnings abrupt, dangerous in many places."

Such a sampling of "The Californians" indicates that anyone wishing to turn back the clocks of Menlo Park may spend an enjoyable and informative few hours reading the book written by the authoress whose name is also tied closely to local history.

CLASSIC MOTIF . . . . . The builders of estates in the Menlo Park area before the turn of the century furnished their gardens with a variety of things, including the colonnade of "Roman ruins" shown above. The pillars were situated at what is now, roughly, the intersection of Burgess Drive and Laurel Street, on what was the grounds of the Timothy Hopkins estate. The "ruin" became even more so at the time of the earthquake in 1906, when the pillars were shaken down.

Advice for a Menlo Matron:

Proper Dinner Menu for a 'Nabob' — 12 Hearty Courses

Young matrons of the 1890's found that cookbooks not only provided recipes, but also household hints and advice on the protocol to be observed for serving dinner to guests.

In the Boston Cooking-School Cook Book, a reference no home was complete without, a full course dinner is described thusly:

First Course: Little neck clams or bluepoints with brown bread sandwiches.

Second Course: Clear soup with bread sticks or small rolls.

Third Course: Bouchees or rissoles. The filling to be light meat.

Fourth Course: Fish, baked, boiled or fried. Cole slaw, dressed cucumbers or tomatoes accompany this course. Fried potatoes are served with fried fish.

Fifth Course: Roast saddle of venison or mutton, spring lamb or fillet of beef. Potatoes and one other vegetable.

Sixth course: Entree, made of light meat or fish.

Seventh Course: A vegetable. Mushrooms, asparagus or artichokes.

Eighth Course: Punch and cheese course.

Ninth Course: Game with vegetable salad.

Tenth Course: Dessert, usually cold.

Eleventh Course: Frozen dessert and fancy cakes. Bonbons are passed.

Twelfth Course: Crackers, cheese and cafe noir.

After serving cafe noir in drawing room, pass pony of brandy for men, sweet liqueur for women; then creme de menthe for all.

After a short time apollinaris should be passed. White wines should be served cool, adjures the culinary arbiter, and sherry served at room temperature.

The book also advises that at a luncheon, the courses are as many as at dinner. In winter grapefruit was sometimes served in place of oysters; in summer, selected strawberries in small Swedish timbale cases.

'Oldtimer' Recalls Woodside In Its 'Wild and Wooly' Days

James V. Neumann is one of the few oldtimers left who vividly remembers Woodside's wild and wooly days.

When he was nine years old, Neumann was handed a horse pistol and told to defend the old Tripp general store, now a county historical landmark.

The store's owner, Dr. R. O. Tripp, was pretty causal about the whole thing, according to today's 77-year-old Neumann. After regaling the wide-eyed youth with accounts of numerous violent shootings in the neighborhood, "Doc Tripp" suggested:

"Just shoot out the window if there's any trouble and we'll come over."

Tripp and his family lived immediately across the road from the store in a house that later burned to the ground one Christmas Eve. The fire consumed hundreds of gifts the Tripps purchased for most of the townspeople.

Woodside's Christmas Eve celebrations during those turn-of-the-century years were centered at the Tripp home, Neumann fondly recalls. He remembers that the "doc" and his wife were a very generous, sociable, well-loved couple.

An erstwhile dentist, who originally emigrated to Californit from New England, the storekeeper often mixed dental aid with cales over the counter, Neumann tells us.

On seeing a customer's decaying tooth, the enterprising Tripp would grab a pair of forceps from a nearby nail bin and extract it on the spot—with the client's permission of course. Then he'd take the patient to the rear of the store for a swig of whiskey to kill the pain.

Neumann says the tooth pulling and whiskey were "on the house" services.

SPECIALIST

"I never saw Doc Tripp do anything but pull teeth," he recounts. "That seemed to be the extent of his dental work."

And the whiskey?

Well, it seems the doc always kept a barrel of it on hand for such emergencies. It also served as a sociable item, especially for thirsty loggers in the area.

Once during Doc Tripp's checkered career, he served as a deputy sheriff. Neumann says that years later, when he bought old merchandise from the Tripp store, he came across a pair of leg irons that the doc had used in transporting prisoners by horseback to San Francisco.

Of his daughter, Addie Tripp, after whom the Woodside Village Church Guild is named, Neumann recalls:

"She was a slim, dark, fastidious, very social young woman — very well-liked by people were was Miss Addie."

Neumann himself had a very interesting life from all accounts. Now retired and living with his wife at 1333 Canada Road, Woodside, he was the owner of the Neumann Brothers general store, last located at Canada and Woodside Roads before selling out. The store was first established in Woodside in the early 1870's by his father, Andra Neumann, a one time shipbuilder who constructed one of San Francisco's first ferryboats at North Beach.

In 1907 Neumann was appointed engineer for San Mateo County—at the tender age of 22. According to county historical records, he was the youngest county official in the U.S. at the time.

OUT OF OFFICE

He held the post until 1913, when he was voted out of office primarily because he hadn't campaigned.

"I got disgusted with the graft and corruption during the latter part of the term," he explains. "I kept bringing this up before the supervisors."

And Neumann recalls the county's district attorney telling him at the time: "Jim, why don't you mind your own business? You're going to lose votes."

As county engineer, Neumann was responsible for laying out the county's first east-west automobile roads, requested by the supervisors to help attract people visiting the 1915 Panama-Pacific Exposition in San Francisco.

Never one with much stomach for politics, Neumann took over the family store on leaving county service and for the first shakey financial years relied on part-time real estate sales to help keep the business afloat.

Looking back on his 250 miles of roadway that first opened the county's coastside and hinterland to automobile travel, Neumann says wryly that often the only county reaction to his name these days is: "Oh, Neumann, he's the one that built all those crooked roads."

In a more amused vein, he recalls Woodside's "shifting post office" in the years that the Neumann and Tripp stores vied with each other. The Neumanns were Democrats and the Tripps Republicans—with the post office awarded to the Neumann establishment under a Democratic county administration and to the Tripp store while a GOP set-up held sway.

NOT MUCH DIFFERENT . . . . than it is today, the view along Sand Hill Road looks toward Woodside in this 1904 photograph. Riders are not identified.

Drama, Pageantry Always Enjoyed in Menlo

By EDNA CRANE-BURCHFIELD

As far back as I can remember (and that's a long distance) we have had some sort of amateur theater groups in Menlo Park.

I think the first group to do anything along amateur theatrical lines here was when back in the '90's a number of young people, members of the Presbyterian Church, organized.

Mrs. Leland Stanford, a member of the church, donated an organ and arranged for a singing teacher to come from San Jose to instruct the choir. From time to time, members have presented a wide variety of shows. Not so many years ago, members of this group presented a "Gay Nineties" evening, costuming correctly to the minutest detail.

FOLLIES

Holy Trinity Episcopalian Church has had its share of interest in presenting dramatic entertainment. One group presented a "follies" show in connection with their annual bazaar and church young people have sent a group around during the Christmas season singing carols. At the present some of Trinity's congregation appear with "Comedia."

After Nativity Hall was built, parishioners got together and gave plays for special occasions. An informal group, it ha dno president, no laws, no constitution, no board of directors and no dues. It was just a crowd of people who wanted to act.

As a rule, at the start, they had no director although if he happened to be interested in that sort of thing the pastor would direct. Father Hannigan who had a fine tenor voice directed several musicals.

FATHER McKEON

After the present pastor, Father Thomas McKeon, was appointed he took a definite interest in the choir, which he directed, and in the plays produced by the theater group.

If pressure of other matters prevented his appearance at every rehearsal, Father McKeon let the young people select a play which he would approve before rehearsals started. It was always his custom to drop into the hall now and then to watch the cast working and perhaps to give a few words of advice.

Many of the members of the cast of those early-day plays are no longer with us — John and Harry Morey, Jack Welch, Joseph Kelly, and many others.

PROMPTER

John Kelly Sr. was the stage manager and could prompt if he had to, but occasionally he got bored with the whole thing and went out for a smoke, leaving the actors to get by on their own.

Back in the early 1900's, Louise Daly, who taught kindergarten at the first Central School on El Camino Real, used to appear in and direct plays. Most of them were either one-act plays, skits or monologues. They had neither the cast nor the equipment for a three-act play. Those were the days "Cox and Box" were considered a scream. In this organization was an Englishman named Edward Taylor. He was a rather meek looking little man who could play a stage Englishman, Oxford or Cockney with equal facility. He and Louise Daly made a wonderful team as her work was above that of the average amateur, even judging by today's standards. She was a marvelous mimic and clever at dialects.

Most of the Nativity group's theatrical performances were given in the hall over Duff and Doyle's store at El Camino Real and Santa Cruz Avenue. Except for church social rooms the only place available for theatrical affairs was an old, run down building on El Camino Real just north of Oak Grove Avenue, called Triumph Hall. It housed everything from church plays to prize fights. The yearly flower show was held here when Atherton owners of large estates displayed flowers from their gardens. Florists came from miles round to view the magnificent orchid display grown by John MacDonald on the Coryell place.

VARIED PROGRAM

I remember one show at this hall, put on for an injured athlete. The show opened with four girls doing a dance known as the hoedown. They were followed by a rather overweight woman dressed in pink bombazine and carrying a calla lily who somehow got through Tosti's "Goodbye." She was followed by two prize fighters from Colma, who nearly beat each other's brains out.

There were several attempts made to form a town theatrical organization, but nothing much ever developed — until around 1938 when the Menlo Players was formed.

Several directors worked with them, but finally A. Clay Gaines was voted regular director and directed all the plays from that time until he and Mrs. Gaines moved to San Francisco.

This group is still extremely active and is doing splendid work. I am proud to be both a charter and a life member of the organization. I suppose as long as Menlo Park people like to dress in costumes and recite, we will have our theatrical groups. I hope so.

OUR THANKS

Grateful acknowledgement is made to those who aided the Recorder in the preparation of this "Nabob Days" special section.

Menlo's Postoffice Has Moved Many Times . . . But Never Very Far

When the new mail handling facility in Bohannon Industrial Park opens for business next month and the present facility at 560 Oak Grove Avenue is closed as a postoffice for good it'll mean the end of a tradition.

Through all the years until now, the Menlo Park postoffice has been situated somewhere on the block bounded by El Camino Real, Oak Grove, Merrill Street and Santa Cruz Avenue.

A resume of its various moves was made in 1948 by the late Bob Cain, who at that time was interested in Menlo Park's history.

We quote from an article which appeared in the Recorder Jan. 14, 1949:

'MISTORY'

"A tiny postcard which the editor promises to show on this page gave me the slight excuse necessary to write a small chapter in my own unabridged, unofficial and unpublished document called the "Mistory of Menlo," which I generally write on Thursdays. By the following Friday I can print another version from the mistakes of the original. The pressure of the pen being far greater than the common sense of the head, I couldn't help but try and place the village postoffice in its wanderings about Menlo Park."

"The little building took care of Menlo Park's postal needs in the late 90's and the early 1900's (vague but safe)."

"According to my informants the first official postoffice was in the Duff and Doyle building, situated on the corner of El Camino and Santa Cruz, now occupied by a used car lot."

NATIVE SONS

This original old structure, two stories high of red brick with iron shutters, housed the mercantile establishment of Duff and Doyle, replacing an earlier wooden structure. Above the store was a large hall used by the Native Sons as a meeting place and later it became the Masonic Hall. In later years Ted Dale conducted a grocery there in the early 20's; Liddicoat brothers had the meat market. Still later Martin McCarthy occupied the grocers department until to meet the needs of progress, the building was torn down during the last widening of El Camino."

"Somewhere through the years the postoffice left the hands of Duff and Doyle and was established on a site shown in the photo as the frout of a dwelling on the property now occupied by the Toyon garage.

ON THE MAP . . . . . Menlo Park's first postoffice was the structure shown above, opened in the 1870's and operated by Mrs. Jane Loveland. The building faced Santa Cruz Avenue between El Camino Real and the railroad tracks. Later moved to a lot facing Crane Street between Santa Cruz and Oak Grove Avenue, the little building was razed only a few years ago, to make way for commercial development.

A house can be seen facing the depot and the site apparently was facing Golder Lane or Santa Cruz Avenue on what is now the rear of the garage. The adjoining houses on both sides of the garage building are still serving adequately as dwellings. Mrs. Loveland was Postmaster at the time and resided in the rear portion of the structure."

"I've puzzled over the youngsters around the door and our best authorities say that it looks like it might be Eddie Derry leaning against the side, perhaps even then thinking of the day when he'd build a postffice of his own. The other youngster may have been Joe Kelly on the trail of a weier from Ed Tuites' meat wagon from the Palace Market. As to the two little girls on the step, I'll wait and see. I wouldn't venture even guessing their identity, that would be a sensitive point."

"A little uncertainty surrounds the next move, but apparently the postoffice jumped across the street to the Murray Block and when I arrived on the local scene it occupied that site."

"During this period James Mason succeeded Mrs. Loveland and later E. J. Crane became postmaster and he in turn was succeeded by B. G. Larrabee. Some 40,000 marching feet had passed through Menlo Park during those days of Camp Fremont ,and the postoffice was taxed far beyond its capacity. During this hectic time a big theater stood at the El Camino corner of the block, called the Liberty Theater. Another theater was located near Oak Grove and El Camino and one on Santa Cruz avenue. Roos Bros. had a store here in the building occupied by Ryan's Hardware. This building was built by J. C. Brown, former councilman who conducted a grocery store on the premises."

"Many old Fremont buildings are still in very good use. The grandstands are at Santa Clara and another building is now the Veterans building in Palo Alto, among Fremont graduates. The St. Francis Cafe of 1919 is now being remodeled as a hobby store on Santa Cruz Avenue, to identify a few."

"The postoffice, with the Menlo Fruit Market beside it, and Arnold Van Epern's garage across the street, stayed put until 1934 when it was moved to the Maloney block on El Camino."

"Harry B. Morey has been postmaster these past 15 years."

"In December, 1948, at the conclusion of the biggest year of its history, the postoffice moved to its splendid new headquarters on Oak Grove."

"The mails have taken quite some time to make the circuit around the block to their present home."

ANOTHER LOCATION . . . . . of the Menlo Park postoffice was in a corner of a garage, at Santa Cruz Avenue and Merrill Street, which was the location during the 1910's.

In 'Good Old Days':

Here's How to Start the Stove

Fannie Merritt Farmers' Cook Book published before the turn of the century tends to prove once again that the mechanical servants of the day offered a challenge to the housewife that would panic her modern counterpart.

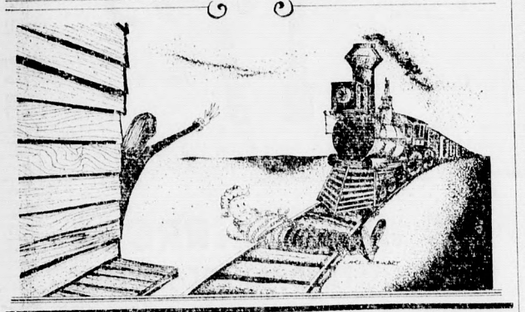

Her instructions on building a fire in a wood stove are lengthy and brook no deviation from the prescribed procedure.

"Says Mrs. Farmer (in part):

"Before starting to build a fire, free the grate from ashes. To do this, put on covers, close front and back dampers and open over-damper; turn grate and ashes will fall into the ash receiver. If these rules are not followed ,ashes will fly over the room. Turn gate back into place, remove the covers over the fire-box and cover grate with pieces of paper. Cover paper with small sticks or pieces of pine wood, being sure that the wood reaches the end of fire-box and so arranged that it will admit air. Over pine wood arrange hard wood, then sprinkle with two shovelfuls of coal. Put on covers, open closed dampers, strike a match — sufficient friction is formed to burn the phosphorus, this in turn lights the sulphur and the sulphur the wood. Then apply the lighted match under the grate and you have a fire."

Early Public Service:

Firemen of Today Preserve Relics of Volunteer Brigade

Last weekend, firemen stationed at headquarters station, 300 Middlefield Road, were busy with an historic project.

They constructed a trailer, on which the fire district will be able to carry its old hose wagon from place to place, to exhibit it on various occasions.

The old hose wagon, which is carefully maintained and which occupies the house originally built for it more than 60 years ago, is the oldest publicly-owned vehicle in town. And its house — with belfry and fire bell — is the oldest building owned by the public hereabouts.

The city's original volunteer fire department was organized in 1899 and the members built their own hose wagon house, which originally was situated along Merrill Street, near the Southern Pacific depot.

The volunteer group's formation date corresponds closely to the establishment of the first public water system in the area, too — obviously, a hose wagon is not of much use unless there's water to be carried from mains to a fire.

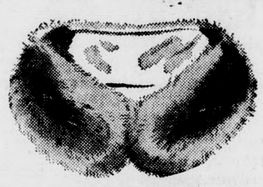

The organization date corresponds closely, too, with the destruction by fire of the old Kuck Hotel, one of the resort hotels for which Menlo Park was famous before the turn of the century.

That hotel, a two-story, wooden building, burned in 1899 also, in spite of the best efforts (Continued on following page)

BIGGEST FIRE . . .
. . . of the 1890's in Menlo Park was, probably, the one that destroyed the Kuck hotel at Merrill Street and Oak Grove Avenue in 1899. The date corresponds closely to that of the organization of Menlo Park's first volunteer fire brigade. As can be seen from this photograph, those who were fighting the fire early recognized that they wouldn't be able to get the blaze under control with the equipment at hand, so they turned their attention to saving as much of the hotel's furniture as possible. Photographer who snapped this "spot news" picture isn't known.

University Showed Need:

High School Formed in 1890's

Though area elementary schools were organized as early as the 1860's, when early day settlers grew sufficiently numerous to support them, the need for secondary public schools in the area wasn't recognized until after the establishment of Stanford University.

This was possibly because the rich estate owners of the south county had their children educated eleswhere — in San Francisco, or in the East.

The wealthier people, too, tended to regard their Peninsula homes as "summer places" —as indeed Senator Leland Stanford regarded his, until the death of his own son prompted him to think of creating a university.

And the university, in turn, besides stimulating people to think of the need for an area high school, also aided in the formation of the first high school district in the area — the Sequoia High School District.

The establishment of the university in 1891 led directly to its establishment. By 1895, there was sufficient concern in the area so that representatives of the seven existing elementary school districts in the area called a meeting to discuss a high school proposal.

Stanford University wasn't left out of the planning. Dr. David Starr Jordan, Stanford's first president gave valuable advice as the committee moved to establish the first public high school between San Francisco and Santa Clara.

SITE CHOSEN

Redwood City was chosen as the site, and in September of 1895 the new Sequoia High School opened in Redwood City, with an enrollment of 53 students.

By 1900 the school was accredited to the University of California.

Originally, the small enrollment of the high school could be housed in two rooms of the Redwood City Public School, an ornate two-story wooden structure which opened in 1895 at the present location of the Fox theater facing Broadway in Redwood City.

The school grew fast, though, and by 1905 needed a home of its own. This was also facing the south side of Broadway, between Main Street and Jefferson Avenue.

In 1924 the school was moved to its present site, but that's recent history.

THE FOUNDERS . . . . . . of Menlo Park, Dennis Oliver and D. C. McGlynn, erected the gate shown above at the entrance to the 1700-acre ranch which they established in 1854. The gate used to face El Camino Real, in the vicinity of Menlo Avenue; the McGlynn-Oliver ranch covered most of what is now west Menlo. It was finally knocked down in an auto accident in 1923.

More About:

Portola Valley Saw Pioneer Cable Tramway

One of Portola Valley's early day settlers was responsible for San Francisco's first cable car system, according to the San Mateo County Historical Association.

It was in 1870 that Andrew Smith Hallidie adapted his aerial tramway principle to an underground operation in the Bay metropolis. He had come west as a youth with the Forty-Niners and invented his "ropeway" to overcome the Mother Lode's rugged terrain. The overhead cable system carried supplies and ore to and from the mines.

In 1883 Hallidie established his family's summer home in Portola Valley. His estate, known as Eagle Home Farm, is presently Stanley W. Morshead's Mirador Farm.

Between 1893 and 1894, the enterprising Hallidie set up an aerial tramway system on his mountainside estate. Reports have it that he built the system primarily to show prospective customers, since he was then in the wire and cable business.

Tent camps sprang up on the estate for Chinese laborers who cleared the land and helped build the towers for the system, which lifted buckets by cable from the valley floor to the Skyline. The donkey engine and terminal were about at the spot now occupied by the Episcopal Church.

The dedication of the first Portola Valley Elementary School in 1894 was climaxed by a special performance of the tramway. Ordinarily it was only turned on for Hallidie's prospective customers.

A few of the tower bases are still to be found in the upper reaches of the hillside area. The system itself was sold, dismantled and taken to a copper mint in Mexico shortly after Hallidie's death.

Firemen of Today Preserve Relics of Volunteer Brigade

Being a member of the volunteer fire department, in those early days, was a matter which conferred considerable prestige. The hose brigademen had uniform sweaters and caps which they wore on state occasions. Some of them are still carefully preserved in the hose wagon house, along with other items of gear such as hose nozzles, ladders and lanterns.

Though the hose wagon originally was built as a horse-drawn vehicle, it didn't remain one for very long.

For the first several years it was pulled by teams of horses owned by the town's two expressmen. The first one to hook up to the wagon, after an alarm was sounded, got a $5 bill for his speed. The two expressmen usually were operating near the depot and competition for those payments was keen.

Before the decade was over, however, the automobile had come to the fore; for several years thereafter, the hose wagon was pulled behind automobiles.

Meantime, the volunteer firemen's organization flourished. At the time of the fire and earthquake of 1906, it had enough authority so that it could ask householders to refrain from lighting fires in the stoves of the homes of the community until after they could be inspected for possible cracks.

Thomas Kearney, member of a pioneer family here, still has one of the receipts which the firemen handed out, showing that the inspection had taken place.

The old hose wagon remained in use until World War I, when Camp Fremont was established here. At that time trucks were assigned to the area, and Menlo Park has had a mechanized fire department ever since.

Meantime, the hose wagon house had something of a history of its own, too.

After the fire district acquired its first headquarters station in 1919, at 1077 Merrill St., the hose wagon house was moved to the rear of it and the building was modified so it could be used as a tool shed and for parts storage.

The modification consisted, mainly, of removing the wide swinging doors from the end of the building — through which the hose wagon was pushed or pulled — boarding up the end, and cutting a standard-size door in the side.

In 1956 when the fire district moved its headquarters to the new location on Middlefield Road the old hose wagon house was moved there, too, and put on a permanent foundation.

The doors were restored to the end of the building, making it as original as ever.

At the time of the latter modifications, workers came upon some of the old meeting attendance records of the early-day firemen. They'd been tacked to the inside wall of the building and marks were made opposite the names of the early day volunteers.

Many of the area's oldest families were represented on that roster.

'Sapolio' a Must In Nabob Kitchens

Says the White House Cook Book, published in 1897, "A cake of sapolio should be kept in every kitchen, to be used freely on all dishes that require scouring and cleansing. All tins that have become discolored can be made as bright and clean as new by the use of sapolio; also shines dishes, and in fact, almost all articles that require any scouring. Purchased at all groceries. One of the most useful articles ever used in the kitchen."

Grandeur Echoes In Lindenwood

The grandest, gaudiest and most extensive of all of the estates of the Nabobs was the James Flood estate, Linden Towers, which occupied the area of modern Lindenwood in Atherton, from the time it was built in 1876 until the main house, shown on the cover page of this section, was torn down in 1934. But traces of the estate remain and can be hunted out along the curving roadways—many of which follow paths laid out by Flood's own developers—of Lindenwood.

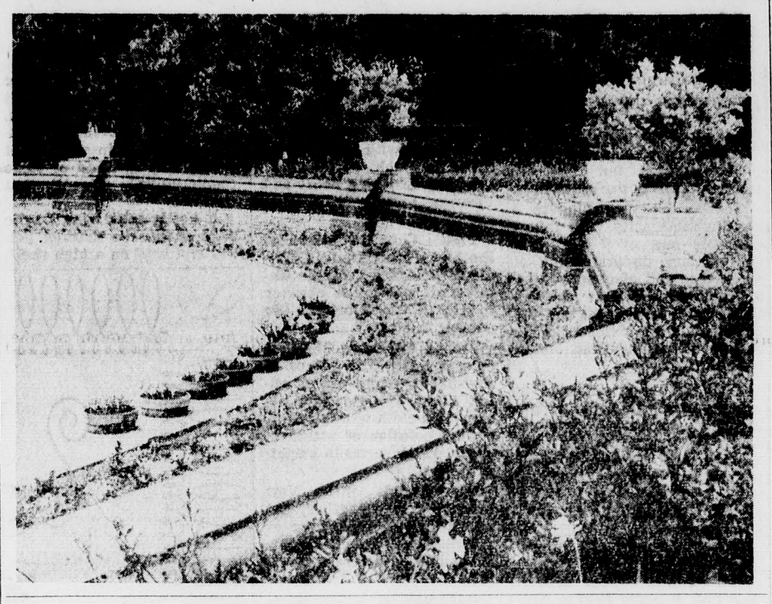

REMINDERS . . .
. . . of a style of living which no longer remains are still to be found in the Lindenwood section of Atherton; some of them, in the area of Flood Circle, are shown here. Above is the well-known Linden Avenue gate which used to be the main entrance to the estate. At left, a cast iron fountain, featuring cherubs and a reaching goose at the top. At right is a large, ornamental urn which even today sports a variety of flowers; a detail on it—a face—is shown at lower right. The lamp post at lower left is one of several that remain in the area; the circular rail shown below, now on private grounds, used to be part of the edge of a fish pond. It's made of marble.

The Umpire Lost:

1893 Scribe Reported On a Baseball 'Fiasco'

Sportswriters always have been noted for their bias and editorial leanings, with early day writing on athletic events apparently setting the pace.

Such was the case in the May 6, 1893 edition of the San Mateo County Times-Gazette of Redwood City, which headlined a baseball game story between Redwood City and Menlo Park with "Baseball Fiasco." And it meant just that. Here's the story:

"The baseball season was opened Sunday last in a game between the Redwoods and Menlos. A large and enthusiastic audience were early in attendance to witness what they supposed would be an interesting game, however, in this they were disappointed.

The Menlos were first to the bat and scored three runs. The features of this inning was a long hit to centerfield by Thos. Maloney and a one hand stop by Gus Stalter. The next inning was devoid of brilliant playing.

In the third inning the decision of the umpire was disputed and both clubs left the diamond to the disgust of those on the grand stand.

It would be well for all clubs of the county to agree upon some competent person to act as offical umpire for the season and thus avoid a repetition of the trouble that occurred last Sunday.

The score at the end of the third inning was 9 to 4 in favor of Menlo.

Dan Driscoll of Sherwood Hall umpired the game.

'LITTLE LEAGUE' . . .

. . . at the turn of the century: This group of 12-year-olds was formed to represent the community in challenge matches with similar teams from other towns on the Peninsula. Youngster at left of the front row is the late Joseph B. Kelly, longtime Menlo Park recreation commissioner, after whom Kelly Park in the Belle Haven area is named. Others in the group were. front row. Arthur Gale, Walter Gale and Ray Kelly; second row, Arthur Midgley, John O'Brien and Albert Midgley; back row, Howard Crane, Chris McCullough, Jim Vizzardi and Guc McCullough. Initials on the shirts stand for Holy Names Society, the Church of the Nativity organization which bought the uniforms for the boys. A. W. Gale and John B. Kelly were the coaches.

Then as Now:

Helpful Household Hints Harass Housewife

Helpful Hints for the Young Housekeeper in publications of the 1890's were no more plentiful than they are in today's women's magazines and newspaper sections, but they did take an entirely different tone.

Today's hints presuppose a certain familiarity with things domestic and even a certain rudimentary understanding of mechanics and electricity. Yesterday's suggestions were written in a way to suggest that the recipients were children in the garden of culinary and household matters.

Many of those collected at random and printed below are unfathomable by today's housewifely standards; others have the charm of awakening recollection of a generation of brides who attacked the running of a household with determination if not with skill.

Never put cogs of a Dover Egg-beater in water.

To clean a copper boiler, use Putz Pomade Cream. Apply with a woolen cloth when boiler is warm, not hot. Then rub off with second woolen cloth and polish with flannel or chamois. Faucets and brasses are treated the same way.

Curtain and portiere poles allow hangings to slip easily if rubbed with hard soap. This is much better than greasing. Creaking doors and drawers should be treated the same way.

Platt's Chloride is one of the best disinfectants. Chloride of lime is a valuable disinfectant and much cheaper than Platt's Chloride. (So much for Platt's).

Before Sweeping Old Carpets, sprinkle with pieces of newspaper wrung out of water. After sweeping, wipe over with a cloth wrung out of a weak solution of ammonia water, which seems to brighten colors.

Tie Strands of a New Broom closely together, put into a pail of boiling water and soak two hours. Dry Thoroughly before using. (Oh?)

Macaroon Dust. Dry macaroons pounded and sifted.

To Wash Mirrors and Windows. Rub over with chamois skin wrung out of warm water, then wipe with a piece of dry chamois skin. This method saves much strength.

Cut glass should be washed and rinsed in water that is not very hot and of same temperature. (How's that again?)

A bottle containing Oxalic Acid should be marked poison and kept on a high shelf.

First Water System Here in 1863

The first water company to be established in the south county area was the Arroyo de las Presa Water Co., established in 1863 and the direct antecedent of the present California Water Service Co.

The name of the company was not long-lived, however, before the end of the year, the utility was renamed the Corte Madera Co.

The company established a storage basin in the vicinity of the present Bear Gulch reservoir and also secured rights to a watershed from which to supply it.

Menlo Park was a hamlet the time. The railroad was e tended through the south cou ty during the same year th the Corte Madera compar was formed, however, and it likely that the water compar promoters saw a chance to su ply a residential communi then in its infancy.

Health Council Scores Another First With Spring Week Promotion

April 11 through April 18:

Auxiliary Outlines Day-by-Day Schedule

Mrs. Alton P. Stich, president of the Clark Auxiliary to the Children's Health Council, and Mrs. Edwin Thompson, Projects chairman, are announcing the day-by-day schedule of activities for "Spring Comes to Country House" Week, April 11 through April 18.

All of the activities will take place at Country House, the Children's Health Council volunteer-staffed lunchroom at Ladera, and in the immediately adjacent area. Proceeds from Spring Week, as well as from the lunchroom, are used by the Children's Health Council to benefit handicapped children.

AMBITIOUS DECORATORS

Huge butterflies will decorate the lunchroom for this event, and the table centerpieces, which will be for sale, will be gilded, moss-covered branches, with tiny butterflies intriguingly perched upon them. Mrs. Gardiner Hammond and her committee, in charge of decorations, will also decorate the shopping area.

Shop windows will be filled with three sizes of candy Easter eggs. Mrs. Walter Brandt and her committee will provide entry blanks so that anyone can guess how many. Three winners will be announced April 18. Prizes are a transistor radio, a camera, and a gift order for two record albums.

DRAWING

Three other activities which will continue throughout the week are a children's art show, for which Mrs. Bruce Moorehead has gathered paintings done by the school children of Woodside, Ladera, Prtola Valley and Walter Hays schools; a drawing for a 20-inch Miss Revlon doll, with an elaborate, all-occasion wardrobe made by Mrs. Myrtle Aarnes, and a sale of handmade gifts at the Country Easter Basket, adjacent to the lunchroom.

Mrs. Dale Smith, gift chairman, announces that there will be desirable gifts for all age groups and original table decorations.

REFRESHMENTS

Special events are planned for each day of Spring Week, with the lunchroom open from 10 a.m. to 12 noon every day for morning coffee, at noon and 1:15 p.m. every day except aSturday for luncheon, and from 2 p.m. to 4p.m. every day except Saturday for afternoon tea and light refreshments. Reservations may be made by calling DA 4-1714.

Fashion shows will be presented twice each day and Gallery House artists will demonstrate between 11 a.m. and 3 p.m.

Wednesday, April 11, Ofra Bruno ,artist from Israel whose husband is doing graduate work at Stanford University, and Grace Ralston, who has designed silver jewelry in Taxco, Mexico, and Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, will demonstrate the making of jewelry. Mary Nelson will paint in oil, and four County Hills Auxiliary members, Mrs. Chester Himell, Mrs. Ernest Schaper, Mrs. H. A. Page and Mrs. Louis Ter Veen, will model outfits from Edith Hanson's at Ladera.

MODELS

Thursday's models will be from Clark Auxiliary — Mrs. Charles Condon, Mrs. William Stewart, Mrs. Richard Clark, Mrs. Carl Clement, Mrs. G. M. Ellis and Mrs. William Nelson — and they will present an Easter bonnet show.

Three artists will demonstrate vastly different techniques for Thursday's Art-in-Action. Anna Wu Weakland will be working on her Chinese brush painting; Estelle Grunewald will paint in oils, and Norm Fontaine will make charcial sketches of "the people passing by."

Joyce Passetti, Woman's Editor of the Palo Alto Times, will be the commentator for the Friday fashion show, which will feature auxilary members parading the Bargain Box fashions. The Bargain Box is the Children's Health Council's shop for nearly-new clothing. Donated clothes will be modeled by Mrs. Dale Hutchison, Mrs. Marvin McGregor, Mrs. William Woodbridge, Mrs. William Wood, Mrs. R. J. Borda, and Mrs. Robert Constanz.

COLLAGE TECHNIQUES

Jean McCandless will display the technique of fashioning bits of paper, string and what-have-you into a collage, and Ofra Bruno and Grace Ralston will be there again with their jewelry. Fresh cut flowers will be on sale.

Monday, April 16, will be Children's Day at Country House, and will feature a Pixie Picnic Party, with small fry eating their lunches from pastel paper bags in the patio while their mothers enjoy a more formal meal in the lunchroom. Professional magician Burl Hall will entertain with a show after each luncheon sitting. The Easter Bunny (Karen Oliver, aged 15) will be around passing out free candy.

SURPRISE LADY

Mrs. August Rohrig will be dressed up as the Surprise Lady, with lots of gifts hidden in her many-pocketed apron, and children will be able to buy the opportunity to reach into her pocket and pull out a surprise. Polaroid photos of the children will also be available.

Pixies who will parade in the lunchtime fashion shows include Judy, Peggy, and Marianne Birk, Janet Brakke, Karen Clough, Judy Hammerslough, Wendy Law, Linda Uddenberg, Vicki Wright and Audrey Zobey. They will wear the Easter sundresses with matching sweaters made for them by Mrs. John Nordstrand. Mrs. Bernard Oliver will introduce them.

"Something appealing to children" will be painted by Bea Miller, demonstrating the encaustic technique, an ancient art, which she is reviving. She will compose the painting in molten wax.

Frances Stevenson will be there with her potter's wheel, "throwing" the pieces onto the wheel for the children to admire.

FOLK SONGS

Tuesday, April 17, is billed as 'Deb Day," with features especially interesting to teenagers. Ardsley Botsford will entertain during lunch with her guitar and folk songs. Mary Nelson, who has won many prizes with her wool, her hook, and her frame; and Joan Donegan will do impressionist flower painting in oil.

A fashion show appealing to teenagers will be presented on the last day of Spring Week, Wednesday, Apr. 18, with members of the junior auxiliaries to the Children's Health Council modeling fashions from a Ladera store. Models will be Meridith Kinyon of Danae, Carol Bale of Demeter, Margaret Inouye and Cheryl Moore of Aurora, and Tina Norman of Athena.

ARMED WITH PROPS . . . . . Mrs. Herbert Hamerslough, Mrs. Hans Goldsschmidt and Mrs. C. Cardoza have each contributed greatly to the massive effort on the part of Children's Health Council auxiliaries for the Spring Week Promotion planned for the Ladera Shopping Center, starting April 11. Country House will serve as a nucleus for the benefit event.

Committee for Art:

Local Hadassah Chapter Presents Marc Chagall Slides

At a tea held Tuesday at Stanford University Museum, Sequoia Chapter of Hadassah presented the Committee for Art at Stanford 12 color slides showing stained glass windows done by Marc Chagall for the synagogue of the Hadassah-Hebrew University Medical Center in Jerusalem.

Mrs. Rolf Landshoff, president of Hadassah, made the presentation of the slides to Mrs. Ernest Sultan, president of the committee, in a brief ceremony in the Miedel Romo of the Museum.

On May 14 at 8 p.m. in Cubberley auditorium, the Committee for Art, in conjunction with Hadassah, will present a lecture on the Chagall windows by Dr. Alfred Frankenstein, noted art critic. Dr. Frankenstein will illustrate his discussion of Chagall's work with these slides.

ANNIVERSARY

In her presentation, Mrs. Landshoff mentioned that Hadassah, the Women's Zionist Organization of America, is celebrating the 50th anniversary of its founding this year. The 12 stained glass windows which depict the 12 tribes of Israel, were commissioned by Hadassah in connection with their 50th Jubilee celebration.

Hailed by art critics as the major artistic achievement in the life of the 72-year-old artist, the Chagall stained glass windows were displayed at the Louvre in Paris and the Museum of Modern Art in New York before being sent to Israel. They are now installed in the synagogue of the Hadassah-Hebrew University Medical Center in Jerusalem.

The windows are 11½ feet high and 8½ feet wide and fit into a superstructure of vaulted arches which crowns the south facade of the building. The windows provide natural light for the synagogue, which is built into the Judean hillside to the north, creating the traditional solemnity of vaults and cupolas of the Old City of Jerusalem. Executed in brilliant reds, blues, yellows and greens, the iconography, based on Genesis and Deuteronomy, is confined to animals, fish, flowers and trees. Following the Jewish tradition no human figures are represented.

Hadassah is an organization of 318,000 volunteer American women which, while functioning as a non-governmental organization of the United Nations, carries on a vast education program throughout its 1300 chapters in the United States and Puerto Rico. The Hadassah program began as a modest attempt to raise the health standards of what 50 years ago was Palestine. It is now a far-reaching system of healing, teaching and medical research, child rescue work, vocational education, social welfare and land redemption.

M-A Teen Topics:

Junior Statesmen Stage Convention

By LINDA KIERNAN

March 17 marked the date for the third convention of the JSA Golden Gate Region at Menlo-Atherton.

Junior Statesmen of America conference activities included a keynote speech, the introduction of a new constitution, legislation, debates, a basketball tournament, dinner, after-dinner speaker, presentation of awards, entertainment and a dance.

M-A students presenting legislation included Gary LePage (common market and allowing more than two terms for the President); Greil Marcus (disapproving the Christian anti-communist crusade), Dick Kornblith, Bill Nugent and Paul Racich.

Joe Melia and Mrs. Patricia Backhus judged the debates. Morning speaker was Philip Burton, assemblyman from San Francisco, and after-dinner speaker was Casper Weinberger, vice chairman of the Republican party in California.

Mary Jean Sakurai and Peter Benjaminson, M-A's team, took the negative side on the topic, "Resolved, that the United States Cease Financial Aid to the United Nations until other Nations meet their Financial Obligations," and ended by taking the first place cup.

The Los Lomas chapter won the best chapter award, with M-A taking second place, and Woodside won the basketball tournament, in which M-A took second place.

"The Starlighters," a Bay Area student band with Merle Knouf and Bob Galbraith from Menlo-Atherton, provided music for the evening dance.

STATE REPS

Mary Jean Sakurai, Greil Marcus, and Peter Benjaminson will attend the American Legion youth state program this summer, beginning the first week of vacation. Mary Jean, M-A's Girls' representative, will go to the University of California at Davis. Peter, Boys' State representative, and Greil, chosen at large by an American Legion post, will go to the state capitol in Sacramento.

The program for girls and boys will be the same. All levels of government, up to and including the state level, will be studied and practiced. The students will be divided into cities and counties, and will elect their own city, and country, and state officers.

The two most outstanding youth state representatives will attend boys' and girls' nation in Washington, D.C., later in the summer.

AFS STUDENT CHOSEN

Kathy Gant has been chosen by the New York American Field Service headquarters as an AFS foreign exhange student finalist. This means that if a home can be found in another country having the AFS program and if M-A can support an American Field Service student from another country, Kathy will go abroad for six weeks during the summer.

She will live with a foreign family and be a part of it for the six-weeks period, during which she will be supported partly by her own family and partly by her foreign family.

Kathy was first chosen, among three other semi - finalists from M-A, by a selection panel at the school. Then the names of the four semi-finalists were sent to the AFS headquarters in New York, along with information and recommendations pertaining to the students, for final selection.

Kathy may not know until several days before her trip where or not she is going.

ASSOCIATE DIRECTOR . . . . . Mrs. Mary Louise Lee has recently been named Associate Director of Little House, Menlo Park's senior center located on Middle avenue. One of her main interests is the center's Human Resources Program which is designed so that Little House members can share experience and knowledge with the up-coming generation through classwork and informal discussion.

UNASSUMING . . . . . in her appraisal of her own work, Barbara Hansen eyes a painting on the easel in her studio bedroom with the critical eye of an artist who thinks in terms of future achievement. As is often the case with the signally accomplished, she enjoys the execution of her painting and places a casual value on an impressive talent.

Luncheon Menu:

Drive to Paint Creates Gratifying Way of Life

Settling into a dull and monotonous domestic routine is a pitfall that holds no terror for Mrs. H. J. Hansen.

An enviable store of physical energy, artistic talent and a wide variety of interests create a framework for the bustling life Barbara Hansen lives in the setting of a charmingly remodeled English cottage in Atherton.

Abstract in her use of color and primarily interested in figure work, Barbara is now exhibiting canvasses in Pennsylvania and displayed in ten local shows last year. Making it a point to paint every day, she has "scads" of canvasses which are hung throughout the house and stored in the attic. Last year at a show at the Menlo Park Presbyterian Church she hung 47 individual paintings. Her figure work shows even in the abstracts and still lifes she does as oftentimes a shadowy form is discernible within an inanimate subject. Rather than exact physical likenesses, Mrs. Hansen comes up with a portrait of personality with an unerring instinct for the glancing fragments that make up a composite individual.

During the Korean War, Jim Hansen, a dentist, and Barbara spent two years in England. It was here that she became seriously interested in art studying as an occasional student. Back at home and having settled in Atherton, she studied drawing for two years before her three-year course in painting.

Two charming small girls, Christina and Jessie, make up the balance of Hansen household and also serve as models for their artist-mother. In addition to the time she spends with the children, the hours she devotes to painting, Mrs. Hansen also finds time to be active in the Menlo-Atherton Chapter of Children's Home Society, is serving as president of the Mid-Peninsula Dental Auxiliary, and belongs to both the Peninsula Ballet Guild and the Palo Alto Art Club.

Her love of beauty is not a thing reserved for painting. It is evident in the details of the remodeling of the Hansens' home, in the furniture they selected while in England, in the way Mrs. Hansen wears her own clothes and in the way she chooses wardrobes for Christina and Jessie.

Additionally, she applies her sense of form and color to the preparation and serving of meals. An experimental cook, she leans to French recipes. The recipes have been adapted to the Hansens' way of life which includes the entertainment of house guests in large number and the brunches and luncheons Barbara enjoys serving.

The menu below is one that Barbara has selected as ideal for luncheon and the bean casserole one she has served delighted guests at brunch.

Crab Soup
Rice
Crusty Bread and Butter
Lemon Souffle
Champagne

Recipes for the luncheon menu are included below as well as the recipe for a bean casserole which Mrs. Hansen has served at brunch to the pleasure of her guests. ,

CRAB SOUP
(serves six)

3 cans 10-oz. each, clear chicken broth
½ teaspoon saffron
1 cup diced celery
1 cup diced carrots
2 leeks, diced
4 shallots, chopped fine
3 large green peppers, seeded and diced
¼ lb. butter
3 tomatoes, skinned and diced
3 cans, 6½ ounces each, Japanese king crabmaet
2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce
1½ cups rice
¼ cup freshly chopped parsley
Salt and freshly ground pepper

Heat the chicken broth with saffron, first skimming off any fat in the broth. Cut the celery, carrots, leeks and peppers in about the same size dice, not too fine. Chop the shallots fine. Melt butter and steam the shallots, celery, leeks and carrots for about 10 minutes. Add the peppers and continue cooking without letting vegetables brown. Cook about 5 minutes, stirring occasionally. Skin tomatoes by immersing in boiling water for a minute. Dice them and add to steaming vegetables. Continue steaming, adding a little butter if needed. Remove any hard particles from crab shredding fish at the same time. Add to the vegetables with the Worcestershire. Cook 5 minutes, stirring. Add to the saffroned broth. Add salt and fresh ground pepper, simmer a few minutes or reheat at serving time.

Cook the rice a little underdone and serve in a heated dish. Pour the hot crab stew in a heated tureen and sprinkle with parsley. Put a generous spoonful of rice into a heated soup plate and pour soup over.

LEMON SOUFFLE

4 egg yolks
Grated rind and juice of 1 lemon
⅔ cup sugar
4 egg whites, beaten stiff

Beat yolks of eggs until thick and lemon - colored. Beat egg whites and fold in gradually. Bake in mold for 20 minutes in moderately hot oven (375 degrees). This produces a soft center, the French method of preparing a dessert souffle, and thus does not require a sauce. The souffle should be served immediately after it is baked to prevent falling.
